Roosevelt Threatens To Veto Ruml Tax Plan On Eve of House Battle

G. O. P. Confident Senate-Approved Measure Will Be Passed Today

Up for Third Test

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt last night added the threat of a veto for the Ruml skip-a-year tax plan to the arsenal which his congressional allies today will use in attempting to beat back for a third time an unwavering House Republican campaign to guarantee its passage.

On the eve of the House test, which could be decisive, the President sent letters to the Capitol renewing his and the Treasury's argument that the Ruml plan would enormously benefit the wealthy by transferring heavy tax burdens from them to the lower income groups.

House Republican Leader Martin, of Massachusetts, claiming at least six new votes with which to turn the 4-vote margin by which the House two weeks ago defeated the Ruml plan, made clear that his signals call for going ahead and giving the President the opportunity to exercise his veto.

Offers No Formula

The President first informed Speaker Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, by phone of his veto intention. Later the White House made public identical letters from him to the heads of the two Capitol tax-writing committees, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, Finance Committee Chairman, and Representative Doughton (Democrat, of North Carolina, Ways and Means chairman.

While declining to name his formula for pay-as-you-go taxation, the President voiced the hope that a bill might be worked out in conference between the House and Senate "which I can sign."

Many Plans Rejected

"I believe that there should be substantial adjustments to ease the transition to pay-as-you-go, but there are limits beyond which I cannot go," he said. "I cannot acquiesce in the elimination of a whole year's tax burden on the upper income groups during a war period when I must call for an increase in taxes and savings from the mass of the people."

The Treasury and Administration leaders in Congress have at various times thrown their support to an assortment of plans, all of which the Senate rejected in one form or another, by about the same margin with which it approved the Ruml plan, as modified to catch

Six Nipponese Craft Sunk by U. S. Subs In Pacific Raids

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The American drive to sweep the Japs from Attu Island—greatly handicapped by dense fog—was reported continuing last night, as in other areas of the vast Pacific, United States forces struck offensive blows at the enemy.

A Navy communique announced that American submarines had sunk a Japanese destroyer and five other enemy craft in far-flung raids. Another ship—a large Nipponese tanker—was reported to have been damaged by our subs, while United States Navy torpedo planes set a Jap cargo ship afire in the Solomons.

The only official word on the fighting in the Aleutians was a brief Navy communique stating: "Operations against the Japanese on Attu Island are continuing."

Informed sources said that at last reports a heavy fog was greatly impeding military operations there, both aerial and land attacks.

These authorities, however, were not at all concerned about

11 Nurses Drown as Australian Vessel Sinks in 3 Minutes

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters in Australia, (Tuesday) May 18.—Two hundred and eighty-eight Australian and English medical personnel and 11 women nurses perished when a Japanese submarine torpedoed the Australian hospital ship Centaur a few miles off the Queensland coast in the darkness of last Friday morning, it was announced today.

Only 64 out of the ship's complement of 363 were rescued. The others are missing and believed lost.

The only woman survivor was one of a dozen nurses aboard. No Americans were on the ship.

The vessel was en route from Sidney to New Guinea and was fully illuminated. The Red Cross sign was brightly lighted when the torpedo struck. The ship was traveling unescorted. It sank within three minutes.

No patients were aboard the Centaur.

The survivors spent 36 hours on a raft before they were picked up

By Ernest Agnew
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 17.—Britain's four-engined Lancasters, flying into fierce antiaircraft fire at an altitude of only 100 feet, early today dropped a barrage of heavy mines which tore breaches in two of Germany's biggest dams and loosed destructive floods in a spectacular and novel blow at Adolf Hitler's war dynamos and canal-borne transport.

Rail and highway bridges and power plants were swept away and industrial centers flooded as the torrents roared down the Ruhr and Weser Valleys across communications to the "invasion coast" of France. The German high command said civilian casualties were heavy.

The raids were carried out by crews specially picked and then trained secretly for the mission for weeks.

Biggest Dam Hit

The dams hit were the Eder, containing 202 million tons of water and described as the largest in Germany, and the Mohne, which held 134 million tons of water. The Sorpe Reservoir, which, with the Mohne installation controlled about 70 per cent of the water catchment of the Ruhr Basin, also was attacked, but no damage was reported to it.

[Nazi raiders attacked London again early today (Tuesday), staging their second successive night raid, and starting fires in at least one city area. The planes stabbed at the capital three times, setting off three alerts just before midnight and in the early morning hours. The city's antiaircraft guns roared into action each time.

[The Berlin radio went off the air shortly after midnight today, indicating that the German capital may be getting its fourth pounding by Allied bombs in five nights.]

At least 2500 pounds of black market potatoes moved toward the consumer in the Washington area yesterday as a report of the Food Distribution Administration revealed the arrival of five carloads to be sold at legitimate prices.

From Bob's Liquor Store, 113 Baltimore Boulevard, Colmar Manor, operated by Robert O. Goodrum, a reporter from The Post bought 100 pounds of potatoes, at 10 cents a pound, which was the last of a lot of 2500 pounds the liquor dealer had in the rear of his store Sunday night.

Clerks in the liquor store in turn said yesterday that 1300 pounds of the spuds had been sold to the Distrct Grocery Store, located at 901 L Street Northwest, at an undisclosed price.

At the District Grocery Store in question, the same reporter bought two pounds of the same potatoes as he had bought at the liquor store, for 12½ cents a pound.

A half a dozen or more sacks of the potatoes were on display in front of the store counter.

Sunday morning The Post printed a news articles to the effect that black market potatoes could be bought in the vicinity of the Florida Avenue and Fifth Street market, between the hours of midnight and 5 a. m.

Yesterday the local OPA reported it had sent an inspector to the market—at 6 a. m.—and found

Secretary Believes He Can Settle Case Speedily if Board Will Give Consent

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Yielding to Secretary of Inferior Harold L. Ickes after defying the War Labor Board earlier in the day, President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers yesterday abandoned plans for a second general coal strike starting at midnight tonight.

The expiring 15-day truce arranged originally by Ickes, as Government operator of the mines, was extended through May 31, Lewis announced in New York.

Ickes, it was learned, is prepared to settle the coal dispute in short order if the War Labor Board will give him the go-ahead signal. He is said to be certain that he can persuade both operators and miners to sign a compromise contract for about $1 day in concessions to each miner, including an adjustment of the portal-to-portal pay demand, and payment for occupational charges amounting to a few cents a day.

Would be Submitted to WLB

In addition to the occupational charges and portal-to-portal pay, Lewis is demanding a $2-a-day general wage increase.

Under the proposed settlement, basic pay rates would be left unchanged, and the contract, when finally drafted, would be submitted to the War Labor Board for approval.

The 13-day breathing spell was provided by Lewis in response to a telegraphed request from Ickes, who expressed the hope "that by this action, the way will be open for immediate collective bargaining conferences." Resumption of collective bargaining had been sought by WLB, but Lewis failed to appear at a morning session in response to a summons to meet with the board and the operators on the question.

Thoroughly aroused at being flouted by the mine leader and remembering other attempts by Lewis to by-pass it, WLB accused him of traitorous conduct by asserting: "This defiance challenges the sovereignty of the United States in time of war and gives aid and comfort to our enemies."

Panel Ordered to Proceed

The board declared "the issue now confronting the Nation in this dispute is whether Mr. Lewis is above and beyond the laws which apply to other citizens of the United States." The board then forbade the coal operators to bargain with Lewis until he appears before the board and receives its instructions. The three-man coal panel was instructed to complete its report as a preliminary to a final decision on the case.

Remarks made by Wayne L. Morse at a session with the operators as revealed by a transcript which WLB made public seemed to preclude action by Ickes to settle the case as long as Lewis refused to come before WLB.

Rail Cases Seen as Precedent

"This board takes the position," Morse said, "that no other agency of government has jurisdiction over this case, save of course agencies of government superior to this board, such as the Commander in Chief. No other agency of government has the authority to direct the parties in this case to proceed with collective bargaining."

Ickes was said to be hopeful, however, that he might prevail upon the board to authorize him

Industry Told To Rush Lists For Induction

Schedules Needed To Aid in Orderly Draft of Employes

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

Need for immediate filing of replacement schedules by employers to enable orderly induction of "necessary" workers was emphasized by Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt yesterday. He announced that 5500 employers covering about three million industrial workers already have filed such schedules with their State Selective Service directors.

The announcement indicated the advanced stage reached by the War Manpower Commission in calculating how and where to get every available male for military service regardless of such previously inviolate classifications as "necessary men."

August Draft of Fathers

A further indication of how close manpower calculations are at the present time was offered at the Capitol yesterday by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, who protested legislation prohibiting induction of fathers until other manpower is exhausted by stating that "we may run out" of other draft registrants about August 1.

Appearing before the Senate Military Committee, the selective service director also made known that "a good many" men now classified as 4-F would be taken to meet the needs of the armed forces. He said about 2,577,000 men have been placed in 4-F for physical and mental defects, illiteracy, and other handicaps.

Hershey was joined by representatives of the War and Navy Departments in objecting to the House-approved Kilday bill which would require the filling of draft

Anglo-Soviet Policy on Japs Criticized

Chandler Hits Allied Strategy on Eve of Churchill Address

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Senate yesterday heard Great Britain criticized for making "no determined" effort to drive the Japanese from Burma and Russia described as "a friend" who "is lending aid and comfort to the enemy that is trying to destroy" the United States.

The charges were leveled at two of the country's most powerful allies by Senator Chandler (Democrat) of Kentucky in the bluntest criticism of grand strategy to be heard in Congress since the United States went to war.

The tenor of Chandler's address was made even more startling by the fact that it was timed less than 48 hours prior to a speech by Winston Churchill, the British Prime Minister, before a joint session of House and Senate tomorrow.

Obviously the Kentuckian, who is an influential member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, was using the Senate as a sounding board for carrying to the conferences of Churchill, President Roosevelt and their military chiefs a plea that the United Nations attack Japan before planning an assault on Germany through the fortress of Europe.

For United Nations' strategists to decide otherwise at the momentous Washington parleys, Chandler declared, will mean "mass murder" for the best of America's fighting manpower, while Japan will be given a chance to so entrench herself in the Pacific that the war with her may never be concluded.

Chandler proposed that the North African campaign be con-

11-Hour Siege On Phone Wins Soldier Bride

New York, May 17 (AP).—An 11-hour telephone offensive during which he popped the question unsuccessfully 139 times ended victoriously today for Pvt. Marvin Rubin, 22, of Brooklyn.

The soldier Romeo will be married in July to 19-year-old Beatrice Brown, also of Brooklyn, but that's only a part of the story.

Armed with $7 worth of nickels, Rubin climbed into a candy store telephone booth yesterday and began what probably was the most dogged dialing spree in telephone company annals.

Every five minutes he rang up Miss Brown and posed this question: "Will you marry me now?" At the end of $6.95 the answer was still "No."

But on the 140th call—Rubin says he lost 5 pounds during the ordeal by phone—his lady-love broke down and consented. The historic words were these: "All right, Marvin, I'll marry you. There's nothing else I can do. I'm worn out."

The couple became engaged in April, but Miss Brown had thought it better to postpone the nuptials until after the war. Rubin is stationed at New Rochelle, N. Y.

The plans for the future development of Washington, discussed in the testimony of H. P. Caemmerer, secretary of the Fine Arts Commission, included 41 projects.

All projects discussed deal primarily with highways, bridges or public buildings, many of which have been discussed for years.

Auto Thief Talks Glibly Of Escapades

A 22-year-old clerk who has been leading Washington, Virginia and Maryland police a merry—and to them—ineffectual chase for the past two weeks in stolen cars, told police last night after his arrest, he had indulged a passion for the possession of high-powered cars in order to impress his girl friends.

The youthful clerk was apprehended in a ten-cent store in Silver Spring after he had been recognized from a photograph by Donald Schulze, 15, of 412 Silver Spring Avenue. The boy called Silver Spring police who took the young man in custody. The suspect readily admitted his identity and told of his activities with cars—none of which he owned—and his races through the streets of the city and environs with policemen and civilians.

He will be questioned in connection with the hit-run traffic death of Miss Cora Frank, 68, last Tuesday night.

Police also began questioning him concerning the whereabouts of the cache of expensive cars he is suspected of having taken from Washington streets. He faces 10 charges in the Eighth Precinct alone. There are other charges against him that will be sifted later.

One instance he related was that he was racing another car Sunday night when police gave chase and caught his opponent instead of him. Another was of his coming from a drug store on Georgia Avenue Northwest and finding a policeman looking the car over in which he had arrived; he darted quickly to another which he stole and made his departure.

House Probers Hear About New Mystery Man

Drew Pearson Gives May Name of Witness In Morrison Case

House Military Affairs Committeemen, after exploring more than one mystery, will be offered the chance to look into another one today.

They will decide in executive session whether they want to take testimony from a mystery witness apparently known only to Chairman May (Democrat) of Kentucky and to newspaper columnist and radio commentator Drew Pearson.

Pearson handed May a slip of paper yesterday, with the indication that it contained the name of the man who had told him that Representative James Morrison (Democrat) of Louisiana, was supposed to profit personally from the attempted sale of two boilers by a constituent.

Before this transaction Morrison had paused briefly in a 90-minute rolling, rocking lope before the committee to "confess" that the only "payoff" he received for persevering attempts to negotiate the boiler deal, was a "juicy" chicken dinner from the constituent who owned them. It was one of the few pauses in his stroll, one of the few points where he dropped his voice below a drawling roar.

Virginia Liquor Laws Eased To Give Food Parley 2400 Pints

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., May 17.—The State of Virginia, whose Governor said pointedly that the State Department or any other Federal agency couldn't expect to come into the Commonwealth and stomp on the State statutes, has relented in the matter of liquor for the delegates to the Internatoinal Food Conference at Hot Springs—to the tune of about 2400 pints.

This became known with the disclosure today by the State Liquor Control Board that it had issued a permit to the State Department calling for the importation of 50 cases of Scotch, 20 cases of Bourbon, 10 cases of rye, 10 cases of gin, 6 of Vermouth, 2 of brandy and 2 of assorted cocktails. The request for the permit was made by G. Howard Shaw, Assistant Secretary of State, on behalf of Warren Kelchner, secretary general of the conference.

The 100 cases were to be in addition to the 1 gallon which each delegate and attache could bring in personally under the provisions of Virginia's liquor law. Delegates who wish this liquor served at their tables must comply with Virginia law by becoming members of the club of the Homestead Hotel, where the representatives of 43 foreign countries are staying.

The only places in Virginia where liquor may be purchased are at State-operated stores and citizens of the Old Dominion are now rationed at two quarts per person per month.

Group Riding Taxi Team Finds New Rules Work and Save Cash

By Helene Champlain
and Tom Moore McBride

We learned about group taxi riding yesterday—the hard way.

Equipped with an all-over-town itinerary, an expense account and pretended ignorance of the new experimental rates, we made an in-the-cab survey and learned that most drivers approve of the plan.

Consensus of comments was that the new schedule is eminently fair both to passengers and drivers. But one noncommital cabbie overcharged each of us 20 cents. All seemed willing to cooperate as long as their original passengers did not object, although for the most part they felt that they will lose money.

We calculated that we had saved $1.70 each by sharing our cabs.

Posing as strangers we rode in a total of eight cabs, boarding them about a block apart.

The itinerary, which we agreed upon previously, was as follows: Fourteenth Street, between F and G Streets Northwest to South Interior Building, thence to (1) Broadmoor Hotel and (2) Connecticut Avenue and Portor Street Northwest; Connecticut Avenue and Quebec Northwest to (1) Union Market and (2) Uline Arena; Florida Avenue and Fifth Street Northeast to (1) Union Station and (2) City Postoffice, and finally, in cabs, to The Post building.

We successfully boarded our Interior-bound cab on Fourteenth Street paying the prescribed 20 cents each for the ride. Without prompting, the driver told us of

British Blockaders Trap 2 Axis Ships

Vessels Loaded With Rubber and Tin Scuttled by Crews

By the Associated Press

London, May 17.—Two heavily-laden Axis vessels, intercepted by British warships while attempting to run the Allied blockade of Europe, have been scuttled by their crews, the Admiralty announced tonight.

While the communique gave no dates, it indicated that Germany still is trying—largely unsuccessfully—to maintain sea contact with her eastern Axis partner to help fill the urgent needs for rubber and tin from Japan's conquest booty.

Shipping sources here say it is probable that 30,000 tons of rubber, 5000 tons of tin and 25,000 tons of edible oils were included in cargoes of blockade runners which have been intercepted en route to Germany's European ports from the East since last November.

Two Ships Headed Off

The latest to be headed off by British ships and sunk by their own crews were the 8068-ton Regensburg and the 4793-ton Silvaplana, the Admiralty disclosed.

The Silvaplana, which the Admiralty said was "inward bound from the Far East with a valuable cargo of rubber and tin," was sighted 200 miles off Cape Finisterre, Spain, by the cruiser Adventure, apparently headed for the Bay of Biscay. The cruiser ordered the Silvaplana to stop and her crew immediately started over the sides.

"Flames enveloped the blockade runner's bridge and a series of explosions rent her hull," the communique said. The intercepting vessel rescued the entire crew, including more than 100 German navy personnel.

Taken Off Greenland

The Regensburg, "also heavily laden and inbound from the Far East" and perhaps headed for the North Sea, was intercepted between Greenland and Iceland by the cruiser Glasgow while patrolling in the Denmark Strait.

"Soon afterward, the Regensburg was fired with scuttling charges and her crew abandoned ship," the communique said. Because of the icy waters and a heavy sea, only six of the large company were rescued.

The announcement of the scuttlings was followed closely by an official disclosure that a northbound Axis convoy was caught off the Dutch coast this afternoon by British Beaufighthers which damaged two merchant ships with torpedo hits and fired at least three of the escort vessels.

London, May 17 (AP).—More than 3000 free Norwegians, including King Haakon and the exiled cabinet, attended services today at St. Paul's marking Norway's fourth wartime Independence Day.

Back in the occupied homeland, the puppet premier, Vidkun Quisling, forbade parades, public meetings and the wearing of colors. The few members of Quisling's party had the day off with full pay, but other Norwegians were ordered to work as usual.

Escapes Injury

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 17 (AP).—Col. Elliott Roosevelt, son of the President, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when his plane collided with another on an airfield near Algiers.

Roosevelt and the pilot had landed in a strong cross wind which carried the plane off its course, crashing it aground into a large transport which had just arrived.

Roosevelt said neither he nor the pilot was injured enough to require hospitalization.

'No Way Back'

Stockholm, May 17 (AP).—Prime Minister Edwin Linkomies of Finland made an Independence Day speech yesterday in which he declared "there is no way back." The speech was regarded by competent observers as tightening the already strained relations between Finland and the United States.

He also took note of recent attacks on the government by labor elements which favor closer cooperation with the United States and declared "it would be very bad to weaken us by quarrels on the home front."

The execution of the family, made up of a man and two women, was reported to have been announced in Prague.

A government spokesman said last September that 1568 Czechs had been executed since Heydrich was shot.

Allied Planes Roar Over Rome After Blasting Seaplane Base

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 17.—The Allied air force gave Italy a stern and spectacular warning that politically restless Rome is within easy reach of North African based bombers by sending R. A. F. Wellingtons roaring over the Capital last night after they had blasted the seaplane base at Lido Di Roma, only 15 miles away.

The bombers encountered no enemy fighter opposition and little flak over Lido Di Roma, where they bombed and strafed at leisure from a low level, or while they droned over Rome itself, flooded in bright moonlight.

Frameworks of blackened, twisted steel were all that remained of hangars, moorings and parked planes after the big two-engined R. A. F. craft finished working on the base at the mouth of the Tiber River. No bombs were dropped on Rome itself, although the returning pilots said Mussolini's capital stood out starkly in the moonlight.

Meanwhile, reconnaissance showed that extensive damage was caused in last week's raids which carried to enemy targets a total of more than 4½ million pounds of bombs—the largest weight of explosives dropped in any similar period of the North African campaign.

Summing up the situation at Marsala, a photographic expert said: "The seaplane base, Fascist headquarters, the Molo di Ponente and boulevards and quays all have been seriously damaged. Communications appear to have been seriously interrupted by repeated hits on railroads."

Thirty-two parked aircraft were hit at Borizzo, Sicily, and hits also were scored on barracks, workshops and ammunition stores. At Milo, Sicily, six planes were set afire and 15 others were covered with bomb bursts.

Late protographs confirm the sinking of two ships, the firing of a third, and damage to three others at Civitavacchia, important port 40 miles northwest of Rome.

Flying Fortresses, Mitchells and Marauders of the American Air Force caused much of the wreckage.

(The Berlin radio, still seeking to minimize the Tunisian debacle and impending Allied threats to southern Europe, said in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press that "as far as an Allied landing on Italian soil is concerned, the conviction has been gained from experiences gathered in the Tunisian campaign of how long it takes the Allies to concentrate sufficient troops for operations at a certain point.")

Continued tabulation of the estimated 175,000 prisoners captured in Tunisia disclosed that 27 generals were among the captives.

The tremendous part played by Allied air forces in bringing about the final victory in North Africa was further emphasized today with an announcement that northwest African air force units sank 71 Axis ships, probably sank 103 more and damaged 120 between November 8, 1942, the date of the Allied landing, and May 13.

Of the 15 Senators who participated in the 2¾ hours of debate precipitated by Chandler, 10 indicated agreement with his thesis.

"There is a British army of two million in India," Chandler declared. "They are being held off from Burma by about 60,000 Japanese. I assert that no determined effort has been made by the British to drive the Japanese out of Burma.

"Until that is done, until we reconquer Burma, we are not going to be able to drive the Japanese out of China."

China, declared Chandler, is in such a "desperate situation" that unless she is given "immediate aid" she may be forced out of the war.

Calling for an explanation of the failure of Washington authorities to send enough airplanes into the Pacific theater, the Kentuckian said he understood that Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault, commander of United States Air Forces in China, reduced his request from 500 to 250 aircraft, but has been unable to get the smaller number.

The Senator openly charged that Russia's recently renewed fishing-rights treaty with Japan enables the Japanese to obtain weather information not available to the United States. This circumstance, he asserted, "is what has made it so difficult for us in the Aleutians."

197 Soldiers Bar Press From Food Conference

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Hot Springs, Va., May 17.—The representatives of 31 United Nations and of 14 associated countries are assembled here tonight for their first practical attempt to solve the world's problems around a conference table.

The occasion is the meeting of the United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture, which opens formally tomorrow night at 9 o'clock in the Homestead Hotel.

The aim of this conference, stripped of all technical language, is to make this a better-fed world, to realize one of the goals of the Atlantic Charter—Freedom From Want.

One achievement in United Nations amity already is being hailed here—the fact that the De Gaullists and the Giraudists have agreed upon a French delegation to the conference.

The one sour note in an otherwise harmonious atmosphere in this lovely mountain resort came out of the press arrangements for the conference.

What has been done is to erect a barricade between the conference and the people, the barricade being composed of some 197 soldiers from Governors Island, N. Y., whose job it is to see that newspaper reporters do not go into the Homestead Hotel and talk to the delegates.

This arrangement, credited to President Roosevelt, is particularly surprising to newspapermen representing foreign newspapers and news agencies. They have never seen anything like it in the United States before, and, while they keep a polite silence in public, they have been heard to say privately that it has a totalitarian flavor.

No Military Secrets

It is difficult for many to see why any soldiers are needed here at all. So far as is known, there are no military secrets lurking in the Homestead. The conference is strictly a postwar conference, the embryo of what may be a great world association after the war.

The delegates, men who deal in cotton quotas, ever-normal granaries and the like, would seem to be the last men in the world that anybody would want to harm.

If, however, they did have enemies, those enemies would have had a wide-open field today for when the special train rolled in from Washington with the delegates, there was not a single soldier on hand at the station to guard them.

The soldiers, by the way, switched from steel helmets to garrison caps after stories appeared about their "tin hats." They are all, by the way, fine-looking boys.

There is a suspicion here that the presence of the Army cordon was occasioned as much by distrust of the delegates as by anything else. According to this view, there is a fear that the delegates might talk too much if they came in contact wtih reporters. To make the whole thing even more confusing, however, newspapermen received engraved invitations tonight to attend a reception in the Homestead tomorrow afternoon at which they will be able to talk to and clink glasses with all the delegates. The American delegation, headed by Judge Marvin Jones, will be host.

Some persons here, not representing newspapers, are greatly distresed by the press arrangements. They are fearful that the conference will start off under a cloud of suspicion which it will be hard to dissipate. Moreover, they worried lest this controversy carry over into other conferences and even to the peace conference itself.

Italy Now Ripe For Knockout, London Thinks

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, May 17 (AP).—Italy may be knocked from the war quickly through shrewd application of minimum force and maximum psychology, London observers speculated increasingly today.

The slow advance of bombing raids toward Rome and R. A. F. flights over the city were seen as logical steps to impress Mussolini and the Fascists what might happen.

To show strength and to secure the Sicilian channel, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's overwhelming air, sea and land team in Tunisia might be used to storm Sicily, and then deliver an ultimatum to Mussolini to surrender the peninsula to peaceful occupation or have its cities—including Rome—knocked to pieces.

Nazi Air Force Still There

Such a plan is conditioned largely on the assumption that Germany is unable or unwilling to sacrifice heavily in men and planes to keep Italy in the war. There is yet no clear indication that Hitler is dropping his junior partner.

It has long been known that no great number of German troops are in Italy, but the Nazi air force still is operating there, although it was practically chased from the sky in the battle for Tunisia.

Meanwhile, the Italian cabinet was reported by the Algiers radio to be still in session in a meeting which started Saturday and has been interrupted only once, and that briefly.

A Rome broadcast, heard by Reuters, mentioned King Vittorio Emanuele III warmly, apparently in direct answer to wholly unconfirmed rumors that he had abdicated.

Allied Supremacy Acknowledged

The Aftonbladet of Stockholm, also quoted Italian General Bolladi as making a speech acknowledging Allied air supremacy.

The Moscow radio broadcast a Bern dispatch which quoted Milan sources as saying that Gen. Vittorio Ambrosio, chief of the Italian general staff, had presented his resignation to Mussolini.

The broadcast said Mussolini had a three-hour interview with Prince Umberto, heir to the Italian throne, who was reported to have insisted that several generals removed by Il Duce be returned and that Marshal Pietro Badoglio be assigned to the command of the southern defense zone.

Von Cramm Captured

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, May 17 (AP).—Allied authorities announced without elaboration today that Baron Gottfried von Cramm, German tennis champion, was among the prisoners captured in the Tunisian campaign.

Hour to Strike Drawing Near, Knox Asserts

Boston, May 17 (AP).—The outer bastions of the enemy have been broken down and "the hour in which we shall strike at his main fortifications, both in Europe and in Asia, draws near," Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox declared tonight.

In a speech prepared for the sixth annual dinner of the Massachusetts Committee of the Conference of Christians and Jews, Knox said that the Allied Nations were acquiring greater and greater domination of the enemy's lines of communication.

"This can only mean a swift increase in the number of human lives sacrificed, heavier and heavier expenditure of wealth to support the forces, more and more restrictions, strain and sacrifices on the home front," Knox asserted. "Our young manpower is steadily being absorbed by the fighting services; the supply of vital materials for civilian use grows smaller and smaller. Civilian production and services, already seriously curtailed, will contract still more. The rationing of food has only begun."

quotas on a State-wide basis instead of local board basis as at present. The bill also establishes four categories for induction based on financial and family dependencies.

Chairman Reynolds (Democrat) of North Carolina, of the Senate committee, told Hershey he had received "many complaints that drug store cowboys and street corner loafers" were not being taken, and fathers were.

Replacement schedules list employes liable for military service with regard to their Selective Service status, as well as the importance of their jobs, and state definitely when each can be replaced. When accepted and approved by the State Selective Service director, a replacement schedule is used to guide local boards having jurisdiction over the individual registrants so that their withdrawal from industry may be accomplished with a minimum of interference with war production.

In War Manpower Commission Region 4, which includes Maryland, West Virginia, Virginia, District of Columbia, and North Carolina, 268 schedules already have been filed for 42,000 persons.

Replacements lists include only single men and married men without children or children born after September 14, 1942, as married men with children born before September 14, 1942, are not to be called for induction until ordered by Selective Service.

the ultimate success of the Aleutian offensive and believed that the task of crushing the Attu Japs will speed up as soon as the weather clears.

Axis broadcasts indicated that the Japanese high command held little hope of holding the island. The Tokyo radio declared that American reinforcements had landed on Attu, and Berlin leveled a charge—attributed to a Tokyo dispatch quoting an Army spokesman—that American forces used poison gas to combat "fierce" Nipponese resistance.

This was promptly answered by a Navy spokesman who declared that "enemy claims that the United States forces in the Aleutians have used gas are absolutely untrue."

The claim was believed here to be an effort to prepare the Japanese people for news of the loss of the island.

Another Japanese broadcast quoted Maj. Gen. Nakao Yakagi, chief of the Army press section, as stating that the Americans had launched a three-pronged attack against Attu. The main attacking force, he said, landed on the southern coast of the island Tuesday morning and succeeded in moving inland to attack Japanese positions. They were driven back to the beach that night, he stated.

Another United States force landed simultaneously on the northern coast of Attu and is now engaged in a pitched battle with the Nipponese defenders, Yahagi said. The third force, which attempted to land on the east coast, was "completely annihilated," the Jap spokesman declared.

There was no confirmation of these reports from any non-Axis source.

The United States Navy communique, reporting the sinking of six Japanese ships by our submarines, said the attacks occurred in "Pacific and Far East" waters. Besides a destroyer, a large cargo ship, a medium-sized cargo ship, a medium-sized transport, a small passenger-freighter and a small escort vessel were sent to the bottom, the Navy said.

The communique also told of an attack by Navy Avenger torpedo-bombers on four Jap cargo ships Tuesday in the Buin area of the Solomons. One of the enemy craft was set aflame.

Nazi Infantry, Tanks Assault Russian Lines at Novorossisk

London (Tuesday), May 18 (AP).—The Germans flung infantrymen and tanks into "several attacks" northeast of Novorossisk Monday in a new outburst of fighting in the Caucasus, the Russians announced today.

Heavy artillery and air action accompanied the battle, and the "German operation ended with heavy losses to the enemy," said the midnight communique as recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Heavy fighting also broke out on one sector of the Kalinin front, northwest of Moscow, the communique added, with 300 Germans killed in "a fierce clash." The Germans sent a battalion of infantry and 6 tanks against the Russians holding an inhabited place. Three of the tanks also were destroyed, the war bulletin said.

In the Kuban, 14 German planes were shot down, the Russians reported. Eight fell to Russian fighters, and 6 to antiaircraft gunners.

alone flooded Kassel, important industrial city, and towns beyond it; disrupted hydro-electric stations throughout the area, and seriously affected traffic on the Mittelland Canal, main east-west water artery and a link between all main navigable rivers west of Berlin, and the Wesser Canal.

"The River Ruhr itself might become unnavigable," the air ministry said, "and there is a possibility that important industrial areas in the Ruhr will be flooded. There are more than 300 waterworks and many pump stations in the Ruhr Valley ,and interference with these would very seriously affect the supply of water for industrial processes."

Air Marshal Sir Arthur T. Harris, chief of the bomber command, declared that "we had high hopes, but the immediate results of the breaching of the dams were far beyond our expectations."

Following up this blow at a new type of target, United States heavy and medium bombers and big Thunderbolt fighters swept over the continent this afternoon to keep going an offensive which had been virtually continuous for the past 140 hours.

The American bombers made their mass attack on Lorient's harbor and the adjacent U-boat base at Keroman, and also dropped bombs effectively on Bordeaux on France's southern Atlantic coast. The Thunderbolts made a sweep over the Cherbourg Peninsula.

A "large number" of enemy fighters was destroyed in the clear bombing weather, it was said, and at least two were brought down by accompanying fighters, while 14 of the bombers, including four four-engined planes, were missing.

War Agencies Warn Of Strike Bill Peril

Will Stimulate Industrial Unrest, Slow Output, Letters to House Declare

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Seven Government war agencies yesterday joined in a round robin warning that passage of the Connally-Smith antistrike bill would hamper both production nad procurement "by stimulating industrial unrest."

Unanimous opposition was registered by the War and Navy Departments, the Maritime Commission, the Labor Department, the WPB, the NLRB and four public members of the WLB in a joint letter to Speaker Rayburn.

A separate letter to the Speaker, the NLRB complained that the Senate-passed Connally plant-seizure bill, as sharpened by the House Military Affairs Committee, would provoke "bitterness, rancor and labor strife."

Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB sent a third letter to the Speaker. Davis said it would be better for the WLB to follow present policies of declining to act where there is actual work stoppage "rather than give the board coercive powers."

The almost unprecedented barrage of Government opposition hit the Capitol after a House green light already had been granted the controversial bill. Speaker Rayburn referred the letters to the Military Committee, which last week approved the legislation 21 to 0.

Under a special rule granted last week by the House Rules Committee it is probable the bill will go to the floor at the start of next week unless its own sponsors agree to hold it up.

The Senate-passed Connally bill imposed criminal penalties against leaders of strikes in Government-owned plants—meant to apply against Lewis' U. M. W. in event of a coal strike. The House committee expanded the bill to revive general antistrike provisions of the far-reaching 1941 Smith bill. One new clause would prevent the WLB from ordering a closed shop or insisting upon the maintenance of membership principle in settlement of labor disputes.

The round-robin letter to Rayburn was signed by WPB Chairman Donald Nelson; Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox; Chairman Emory Land, of the Maritime Commission; Assistant Secretary of War John McCloy, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins; Chairman H. A. Millis, of the NLRB, and four public members of the WLB. Spokesmen for the production agencies said they felt some sections of the bill would tend to interfere with war output, while the labor agency signatories said the bill "would impair the effectiveness of the existing machinery for the orderly settlement of labor disputes."

"While recognizing the gravity of the coal mining situation, and without attempting to suggest here what specific steps should be taken in dealing with that situation, we note that, since the Government has taken possession of the coal mines, only a few sections of the bill have any bearing on that particular dispute," said the joint letter.

"The bill contains numerous coercive provisions, including injunctions and criminal penalties. At the same time it impliedly recognizes the propriety of strikes after a 30-day notice and a secret ballot. In both these respects the bill runs squarely counter to the national policy embodied in the voluntary and unconditional no-strike agreement entered into by industry and labor with the President immediately after Pearl Harbor.

Hull Resists Plan to Curb Trade Pacts

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

A Republican proposal to keep a congressional string attached to the reciprocal trade agreements aroused prompt opposition yesterday from Secretary of State Hull.

Hull told the Senate Finance Committee, opening hearings on House-approved legislation to extend the program two years, that any alteration of the Act would be subject to foreign interpretation as indicating Congress might change its mind about the agreements after the war ends.

The Secretary conceded, under questioning by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan that Congress can end the authority or any specific agreement by passage of a new law. Barring that, he said the agreements could be ended only by executive action, and then only after they stand for an initial three years.

Vandenberg then asked if Hull would object to an amendment which, in practical effect, would permit Congress to abrogate an agreement by a two-thirds vote of both Houses. As Vanderberg outlined this proposal, it would be operative only after the war ends, and would not disturb an agreement during its first three years of life.

The Michigan Senator said this could be accomplished by authorizing Congress to nullify the agreements by joint resolution requiring the President's signature. A two-thirds vote of both Houses is required to override a veto.

Hull objected such an amendment might give the impression that "Congress has its mind on repealing" the agreements and might lead other nations to entertain "real doubt about what the course of our Government may be."

"I can't see that it would be any more fatal for Congress to say, as you have repeatedly said this morning, that Congress has the power to revoke these agreements," Vandenberg observed. "I think we agree off the record and disagree on the record."

"Some of these days, if the war gets worse, we may agree on the record," Hull retorted.

Clamping his glasses firmly on his nose, Hull told the committee that a "clear cut extension" of the nine-year old executive authority to reduce American tariffs as much as 50 per cent return for reciprocal reductions by other countries would be of "even greater historical significance" than the original adoption of the plan.

tween May and Morrison. While the air was blue with opinion it was closed to "ceiling zero" on information.

The session grew out of Pearson's suggestion over the radio that the committee investigate whether one of the Louisiana delegation was to receive a "juicy commission" on the sale of a boiler from the New Orleans Public Service Co. to the Aluminum Corp. All eight Louisiana House members demanded a probe. Pearson said that he meant Morrison, and would have said so had not his speech been censored on names.

The columnist testified also that it "may have been erroneous" for him to have suggested that John P. Monroe, Washington manufacturer's agent and dinner host at the big red Georgian mansion at 2101 R Street Northwest, took part in the boiler deal.

Chairman May complimented Pearson following his testimony as having demonstrated "very clearly that you are a patriotic American citizen who wants to see the right thing done."

In contract, he greeted the wind-up of Morrison's testimony with a hammering barrage from the gavel while flashing camera lights kept time—and Morrison went right on shouting.

Pearson and Morrison were forthright in trading opinions of each other.

Morrison called Pearson a "fly-by-night clap-trap columnist," for a starter, and wound up by shouting "that's a lie" into Pearson's right ear when the columnist said that a friend of Morrison's had said the Congressman was to profit personally from the attempted boiler sale.

Pearson said that when Morrison first came to town, "I found him an intriguing, stimulating and amusing gentleman—I still find him amusing."

In addition to the personal clashes, the record was decorated with the transcript of a telephone conversation in which Morrison and Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, reached a stalemate on the question of expediting the boiler transaction and with letters between Morrison and A. J. Piper, of the Aluminum Corp. of America, expressing diverse views about the deal.

Pearson said that he first heard about the boiler deal via an anonymous phone call, but that in checking at the WPB he learned that Morrison had twice gone to see Nelson, putting "great pressure" on to arrange the sale, and introducing himself as a friend of Monroe. While Pearson said it might have been "erroneous" to say Monroe was linked to the sale, Morrison said flatly that Monroe "has not entered into this matter either directly or indirectly at any time.

to go ahead with his plan, using as a precedent a settlement worked out in the case of the Toledo, Peoria, and Western Railroad by a representative of Director of Defense Transportation Joseph B. Eastman under the auspices of an arbitrator appointed by the board.

Morse, who referred to the T. P. & W. case at the morning meeting, stated later that he did so merely to note that Eastman had no authority over the labor dispute in that case—not to authorize Ickes to proceed with collective bargaining.

An aide to Ickes stated that the Secretary of Interior had made no commitments or promises inconsistent with the board's order.

Morse made it clear that the board was ready to stake its existence on the question of refusing Lewis special treatment. The members of the board are understood to be ready to resign in a group if any special treatment is accorded without their approval.

"I am sure glad I speak the voice of a unanimous board when I tell you that this board will not attempt to function on the basis of any such discrimination," Morse said.

The board is said to believe that Ickes deprived it of a chance to arrive at a final showdown with Lewis. Now, failing settlement in the interval, the country may face another crisis, just as acute, 13 days from now, the board is said to believe.

Ickes is said to justify his actions on the enormous wartime need for coal which, he has indicated, cannot be "mined with bayonets." The War Labor Board is said to contend that the integrity of its processes is more important since any grant of special treatment to Lewis may hurt employe morale in war plants.

Ickes in his telegram to Lewis asked for assurance that the members of the U. M. W. A. will continue to work without interruption at midnight tomorrow, May 18."

Lewis replied: "We are impressed with the fact that your telegram reflects the public interest and that you hope to be able to institute immediately the collective bargaining conferences which we have been long awaiting. We are directing immediate compliance with your request and dispatching telegrams at once to all local unions in the anthracite and bituminous coal fields of the Nation."

Two Agencies Lose Funds in House Action

For the second time this session, the House voted yesterday to shut out the Farm Security Administration and the National Resources Planning Board from any additional funds in the next fiscal year.

By a teller vote of 133 to 104 the House adopted an amendment to the urgent deficiency bill prohibiting allotment of any part of the President's $89,322,166 emergency fund to either agency.

The amendment was offered by Representative John Taber (Republican) of New York and had full Republican support. Appropriations Chairman Clarence Cannon tried to recess the House to block the amendment, but was outvoted.

In the Independent Offices bill early this session the House deleted 1944 funds for the National Resources Planning Board, and later in the Agriculture Department appropriation bill cut out 40 million dollars in FSA loan authority and 12 million dollars in FSA administrative expenses. Senate Appropriations Committee is expected to attempt to restore FSA funds.

House Group Takes Ax to Lovett's Pay

By the Associated Press

The $5800 salary of Dr. Robert Morse Lovett, lieutenant governor of the Virgin Islands, who has been criticized by the Dies Committee on un-American Activities, was eliminated from the Interior Department's new appropriation bill yesterday by the House Appropriations Committee.

"It is the unanimous opinion of the committee that this salary, and especially considering the present occupant, can be eliminated at this time without impairing to the remotest degree the efficiency of the administration of the Virgin Islands," the Appropriations Committee report stated.

The committee heard Lovett express "his opinions and so-called philosophies," the report said, and has reached "this deliberate conclusion" despite a communication from Secretary of the Interior Ickes defending the official's conduct and record.

The committee added a $1620 clerk-stenographer position to the Virgin Island appropriation "to assist the Governor in performing the duties of his office."

Requiem Mass For H. R. Maurer Tomorrow, 9 A. M.

Requiem mass will be said at 9 a. m. tomorrow for Hans R. Maurer, 61, who died at his home, 6709 North Central Avenue, Chevy Chase, Sunday night. Burial will be at St. Johns Cemetery.

Mr. Maurer was born at Luzerne, Switzerland and came to this country in 1912. He moved here in 1914, where he has been prominent in building circles and civic work.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Theresa Maurer, a daughter, Ann Marie and a son John, all of Chevy Chase.

Roosevelt Threatens to Veto Ruml Skip-a-Year Tax Bill

"winfall" war income. The Senate vote for the Ruml plan was 49 to 30.

Today's test in the House will come on the proposal of Chairman Doughton to take the differences between the House and Senate bills to conference, with the plan of seeking a compromise. With the backing of Martin, Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, tax floor strategist for his party, will seek a House majority vote instructing the House conferees to accept the Senate bill in full.

Adoption of Knutson's plan would send the Ruml plan to the White House; the conference would be a formality. Its rejection would throw the field wide open to compromise.

Chairman George said of the President's letter:

"I think the President is right. I took the position on the Senate floor that it was unwise to write off a whole year's taxes and that it was not necessary to get the taxpayer on a pay-as-you-go basis."

Informed of the President's letter, Republican Leader Martin issued this statement:

"I regret the President is interfering in the shaping of a tax bill. Of course it is the duty of Congress to legislate and his duty to express his views later. If we are to maintain the integrity of Congress the members must act as their best judgment dictates.

"The President's letter will not change our plan to give the House an opportunity to accept a just pay-as-you-go bill.

"The pending bill should not be made the vehicle for an increase in taxes."

One leading Democrat, who asked his name not be used, said Ruml opponents will seek in the Senate-House conference, if such a conference is ordered, to strike all tax abatement features from the legislation. This would leave a simple withholding levy, along with sections providing special benefits for members of the armed services.

The President raised no specific objections to the House bill.

But he said the Senate measure would "result in a highly inequitable distribution of the cost of the war in an unjust and discriminatory enrichment of thousands of taxpayers in the upper income groups."

The President said the Senate bill would give a man with a $2000 income a tax cancellation equalling less than four weeks' income after taxes, whereas a man with a $100,000 income would receive a cancellation equivalent to 20 months' income after payment of taxes.

"The latter would have canceled more than all war tax increases since 1939," Mr. Roosevelt asserted, "and would thus escape finahcial contribution to the war effort."

Both the Senate and House voted for a 20 per cent withholding tax on wages and salaries to be applied against levies on nidividual incomes as currently assessed. The Chief Executive's declaration against the Senate plan came at a time when some legislators had been discussing the possibility Mr. Roosevelt might withhold a veto if the Senate bill should win House sanction, because the Treasury wants the 20 per cent feature to start by July 1.

'No-Strike' Pact Reaffirmed by A. F. of L. Council

The American Federation of Labor Executive Council acted yesterday to reaffirm its adherance to the labor-industry "no strike" pact with the President, "come what may," stating that it was made "for the duration."

The action was believed to have significance in view of assertions by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, that the War Labor Board had "breached" the agreement by adopting the "Little Steel' 'formula as its main wage yardstick.

"It must be maintained in letter and spirit until the war is won," the A. F. of L. said.

"No mater how sharply the members of the American Federation of Labor may disagree with wartime restrictions that have been imposed upon labor, the no strike pledge holds good for them."

Post Want Ads Bring Results

"I have to push the North Star away from my door"

THE BOYS who used to work beside us at the machines and benches and desks helped write this advertisement. . . . They are scattered now throughout the world—fighting our fight.

But they write to us—from England and Africa and the South Pacific, from Alaska and the training camps en route. They write from all the fighting fronts—and their letters compose our message.

"THIS country is so far north," writes a swell guy who left one of our plants to go with the Army Engineers, "that I have to push the North Star away from my door before I can get out. We get our water from the Big Dipper."

That is typical of the high-hearted good humor of their letters—the humor that in all times and places has characterized the hardy, gallant men who do the tough and dangerous jobs for mankind . . . and glory in the strength to do them.

Of course, there are somber notes, too: "I can now say I truly know what it means to be under fire"..."I lost a good pal, but I know he was proud to go as he did"..."I am out of the hospital, I am not down, I will not worry, because it will do no good."

And loneliness, because even heroes get homesick: "My thoughts are with you very often"..."Say hello to the boys I used to work with"..."There are times when one gets lonesome, but then on second thought it's better to be in action on foreign soil than on our own"..."To feel that we are still part of the Company is the best possible boost to our morale."

THESE letters make us proud. At the same time, they greatly increase our sense of obligation and gratitude. We owe the Harvester men in our Country's service the very best we are capable of in our war production.

But we owe them much more than that!

Men cannot live by material things alone. In time of war, especially, we must reckon with the things of the spirit. Our boys need our letters, our interest, our devotion.

They do not ask much. One letter speaks for all: "To know that those we left behind have not forgotten, is all we ask." We cannot give them less.

Whoever you are, you have a loved one or a friend fighting your fight somewhere on a far-away front. Write him today—write him often—write him cheerful, encouraging letters to let him know that you are keeping the home front ready for his victorious return. In the truest, fullest sense your letters will be Victory mail.

"I'm enclosing a photo of myself beside an International Refueler. We use these to refuel our planes on Guadalcanal."

"We are using a lot of those Half-Tracks we make at Fort Wayne Works. Mud can't stop them, and brother we have mud here!"

"My most impressive sight was a line of 26 of our TD-18 Tractors. They haul the 155-millimeter guns we have for training."

"Keep the Internationals rolling off the production line, folks. We could kiss them when they arrive down here."

"The other day I noticed 'International Harvester' on the side of one of our newest aircraft cannons. That just naturally gave me a warm feeling."

9 Million Pared From Interior Department's Budget at Urging of Ickes

The Interior Department's money supply for next fiscal year was cut 60 per cent below the current year's funds in a joint economy drive yesterday by Secretary of Interior Ickes, the Budget Bureau and the House Appropriations Committee.

The committee cut $9,327,260 from budget estimates of $82,188,576 which Ickes described as the smallest appropriation he had asked in 10 years. The recommended total of $72,861,316 is $119,999,475 less than appropriations for the current year.

The committee acted after hearing the secretary urge drastic reductions.

The Secretary said his department's anticipated income for the 1944 fiscal year from all sources is $63,430,000. That would be only $9,430,000 less than the recommended expenditure.

The committee took sharp exception to WPB's order last year to stop all work on reclamation and some power projects. Officials testified they fear food and power shortages unless prompt action is taken to resume some of the work.

Grover B. Hill, Undersecretary of Agriculture, testified his department is concerned over the prospects of a food shortage.

"Regardless of how much food we will produce, it will not be enough," Hill said.

Abe Fortas, Undersecretary of Interior, testified he believed the Nation will encounter restriction of power, and civilians would be the first to feel the effects.

Ickes said the department's huge hydro projects cannot produce enough power to meet the demands.

"We cannot get materials to complete even a sharply restricted schedule of machinery installations at projects that are ready and waiting for generators," Ickes said.

WPB officials on the other hand testified there was no power shortage in prospect for this or next year, but said things might be tight in some sections in 1945.

OPA Attacked As 177 Million Fund Is Asked

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to provide $177,355,000 for the Office of Price Administration during the fiscal year 1944.

Congress provided $120,000,000 for OPA for the current year ending June 30.

The Budget Bureau said in its letter to Speaker Rayburn that the increased sum was needed to provide "an adequate staff of specialists in price control, rationing and rent control."

Meanwhile a "drastic shake-up" in the Office of Price Administration was recommended yesterday by a House Naval Affairs subcommittee as two other House committees planned to investigate the agency's regulations and rent control practices.

Food Situation

Contending "this is the time for doing jobs, not holding them," the Naval Affaoirs group, investigating congestion in War Production centers, reported the critical food situation in the San Francisco Bay area was due largely to "faulty and incompetent operation" of OPA.

The Small Business Committee will hear today from about 19 retail organizations on effects of OPA orders. Another committee, created to ascertain whether Federal agencies surpass their legislative powers, prepared to hear simultaneous testimony on OPA rent control practices.

Shakeup Demanded

Stating the OPA had ample power under existing legislation to correct such "deplorable conditions" as existed on the food fronts in Western war production areas, the Naval Affairs Subsommittee declared as imperative "a drastic shakeup in the personnel of Office of Price Administration, as well as a complete revision of its methods and practices in the allocation, allotment, and rationing of food" in production centers.

The subcommittee also assailed OPA rent control practices, which it said were not satisfactory to either tenants or landlords.

The subcommittee recommended that ongress amend laws governing rent control authority if changes are not forthcoming immediately.

"There can be no question," it added, "but that under the present administration of the Rent Control Act many properties that would otherwise have been rented have been kept off the market."

Cry 'Gestapo'

U.S. Building Barred to Legislators

Philadelphia, May 17 (AP).—Postmaster Joseph F. Gallagher refused today to permit a courtroom of the Federal Building to be used as a hearing room by an all-Republican committee of Congressional representatives here to study food and rationing.

Acting as custodian of the building, Gallagher ordered the doors barred because, he said, the Congressmen did not constitute an official body. Two uniformed guards were posted to enforce his orders.

Protesting loudly, the Representatives shifted their scheduled hearing to the ballroom of the Benjamin Franklin Hotel. Representative Hugh D. Scott of Pennsylvania, who was to have presided, characterized Gallagher's action as "New Deal Gestapo methods" and said he would ask Congress to look into the refusal.

The 14-member committee was appointed last week by Representative Martin of Massachusetts, House minority leader. It is headed by Representative Thomas Jenkins of Ohio.

Springer Discerns New Deal Propaganda

Representative Springer (Republican) of Indiana told the House yesterday he had come across "an obvious attempt to invade our public school system" with "heavy-plated New Deal propaganda."

Citing a 93-page pamphlet entitled "My Part in This War," put out by the National Association of Secondary School Principals, Springer called his colleagues' attention to a section he said was contributed by Dr. Walter D. Cocking and Marcus Rosenblum of the Office of Price Administration.

"It praises the Federal Security Administration, an expensive creature of the New Deal," said Springer, adding:

"It urges that grade labeling be given public support. This is another controversial issue recognized as the brain child of New Deal agencies bent on standardization. . . . It strongly conveys the impression that the press and radio give unfair treatment to Government announcements by distortion 'to make the news more interesting;' . . . and that the 'facts of rubber shortage were grossly and persistently confused, occasionaly to the private advantage of those muddying the water.'"

Group Riding Plan Proves Profitable

the new rates and said that the day before we would have paid 30 cents apiece.

After being refused by two cabs (one with two passengers and one with a single rider) we obtained a ride to Porter Street on Connecticut Avenue and the nearby Broadmoor. This driver showed us the schedule on which he had entered routes and fares paid during his first hours under the new plan. We paid 50 cents each.

There were two people in the next cab, newlyweds who were spending their honeymoon driving about at hourly rental rates (as of yesterday, hourly rates became illegal). But they didn't object to picking us up, and we were taken to the Union Market and Uline Arena for 50 cents, respectively.

After Slight Delay

After a slight delay during which one of us was first taken to the Railway Express rather than Uline, we met again at Florida Avenue and Fifth Street Northeast, bound for Union Station and the City Postoffice. Two cabs passed one of us and stopped for the other, but were waved on while we waited for a cab which would accommodate us both.

The driver who did stop charged 50 cents each for the trip to Union Station, which the PUC zoning map designates as a 30-cent per person trip. We didn't realize we were overcharged until later.

From Union Station, we took separate cabs and in each case the cost was 20 cents, in compliance with the rules.

in the middle of the afternoon Saturday.

A half dozen survivors stood for the entire 36 hours on the wheelhouse wall which was blown into the water and served as a makeshift raft. Most of the time the boards were 2 feet under water and toward the last they were about to go under entirely.

Approximately half of the survivors were members of the crew. The only surviving woman passenger was pretty brown-haired Sister Eleanor Savage of Sydney. She helped keep up the morale of others with fervent prayers. Only when rescued did she disclose a side injury she had received and doctors discovered she had three broken ribs.

Frank Davidson, Sydney, ship's butcher, said that before he jumped from the ship he saw through the companionway a pitiful surge of medical men attempting to force their way up through the hatches, which were blocked by debris from the explosion. He said he could hear them screaming for help.

Japanese Warned

United Nations Headquarters in Australia (Tuesday), May 18 (INS). Aroused by the sinking by a Japanese submarine of the Australian hospital ship Centaur, Gen. Douglas MacArthur today warned the Japs that their savagery will not halt the Allied drive to "inevitable victory."

"I cannot express the revulsion I feel at this unnecessary act of cruelty," MacArthur said. "It's limitless savagery represents the continuation of a calculated attempt to create a sense of trepidation through the practice of horrors designed to shock normal sensibilities. . . .

"The Red Cross will not falter under this foul blow. Its light of mercy will but shine the brighter on our way to inevitable victory."

Ration of Sugar Remains Unchanged

The current sugar ration will remain unchanged in the next rationing period beginning June 1, the Office of Price Administration announced yesterday.

Sugar stamp No. 13 in Ration Book No. 1 will become valid June 1, and will be good for five pounds of sugar through August 15. This maintains the current ration of five pounds of sugar for a period of two and one-half months. Stamp No. 12 expires May 31.

Five Carloads of Potatoes Arrive Here

In the meantime a telephone call was received from an anonymous person who reported the existence of another black market, where the red Bliss potatoes from around Tampa were being sold at 12½ cents a pound.

The potatoes bought yesterday were from Hastings, Fla., the crop which was just recently harvested. This also is the crop which OPA enforcement officials said was being closely watched by inspectors and it was "very unlikely any would find their way to the black market."

At the liquor store the night clerk said they had obtained the potatoes from a trucker who had sustained tire and other troubles and wanted to raise some quick money to return to Florida.

He promised to hold 100 pounds for the reporter until yesterday morning.

Yesterday afternoon the newspaperman and a photographer from The Post went for the potatoes. They were first told the entire stock had been sold out. They then asked the name of the buyer and expressed the desire to obtain some potatoes from him.

It was then that the purchase by the District Store on L Street was revealed, but the price was withheld.

Photographer and reporter went to the District Store at 901 L Street Northwest.

The woman at first understood it was desired to buy the potatoes wholesale and was reluctant to make the sale, saying they had gone through considerable trouble to get them.

The reporter then made the purchase of two pounds for 25 cents.

Symphony Meets Friday on Fund

To consider the crisis facing the National Symphony Orchestra because of failure to reach its $115,000 sustaining fund goal, all members of the orchestra association were yesterday urged to attend the annual membership meeting Friday at 5 p. m. in the U. S. Chamber of Commerce Building, Connecticut Avenue and H. Street Northwest.

In a letter mailed yesterday to all members of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, E. R. Finkenstaedt, secretary, stated that "at this writing we are still $21,571 short of our sustaining fund goal for 1943-44. If the full amount of the 1943-44 sustaining fund, $115,000, is not accounted for by the date of the annual meeting, important decisions will have to be taken at the meeting regarding the future of the orchestra."

Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IN ONE OFFICE of the Navy there is a map on the wall. For 25 cents a naval officer can stick a pin in the part of the map where he believes the invasion of Europe will take place.

So far there is $13.50 in the pot, which goes to show how many different theories exist inside the Navy as to where the second front will start. The final decision of course will be made by the gentlemen now discussing strategy in the White House.

There are some interesting difficulties between this current meeting and those previously held between the President and Winston Churchill. Aside from the fact that during the other conferences we were not winning, and now we are, the most important difference is secrecy.

Both at Casablanca and in Washington last summer, the Churchill-Roosevelt conferences were absolutely mum. No announcement was made that the two statesmen had met until it was all over. There was no particular reason for the Washington secrecy because Churchill was subject to no danger, at least no more than he is today.

This time, however, the Allies want the Axis to know that Churchill and Roosevelt are meeting. Obviously they want it known that they are discussing the one big question sure to spell Axis defeat—a second front on the European continent.

The knowledge that Roosevelt and Churchill are plotting new offensives just as the Axis suffers its most crushing blow is bound to have terrific undermining effect on the people of Germany.

Axis Kept Guessing

Speculation is running rife in the Axis today, as a result of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting, as to where and when the Allies will strike next.

Since the Axis has some of the best military strategists in the world, and since charting a war, like chess, include efforts to read the enemy's next moves, here is probably what Nazi stratigists are speculating on right now:

The Allies, they know, can make one of three general moves to invade Europe: (1) Across the Mediterranean into Italy; (2) around the Mediterranean through Turkey and the Balkans; (3) across the Channel to France.

The firt of these across the Mediterranean into the two Italian islands of Sicily and Sardinia, the Axis is already counting on. The German radio has warned of Allied transports and troopships at Gibraltar for this purpose. So the invasion of Sicily and Sardinia must seem certain. But the Axis also knows that we know how hard it would be to go beyond Sicily on up the Italian peninsula and penetrate the Alps which hem in Italy from Europe proper; also how difficult it would be to feed the 47 million people of Italy.

The second front through the Balkans, the Axis knows, would be slower. Troops have to be shipped farther. A neutral Turkey has to be reckoned with. Also, and this is most important, the Axis can speculate that Russia does not want British armies in Balkan countries which she expects to bring under her wing after the war.

However, these two fronts—through Italy or through the Balkans—have one great advantage, that American troops already are nearby. They are in North Africa, together with British troops, therefore they don't have to be transported across a submarine-infested Atlantic.

Across the Channel

This brings us down to the third possible front—across the Channel to France. This is the front which we know worries the Axis most, where they have built up the heaviest fortifications.

Undoubtedly, Axis worries stem from two things: the narrow 20-mile distance from England; knowledge that Russia has consistently wanted a second front in this part of Europe.

Russia's wishes regarding this have been widely published. The Axis knows that last summer Foreign Minister Molotoff came to Washington to urge a second front in France and that this was vetoed for one reason: Churchill's unwillingness to use English troops across the Channel. Later, as is known, Canadian troops led the bulk of the attack in the Dieppe commando raid.

Churchill's reasons for not using English troops in a second front last summer were published at the time—the fact that they were not sufficiently trained and equipped, were only strong enough to protect England itself from invasion.

If Churchill stuck to that thesis at Casablanca (and diplomatic rumor has it that he did), then a second frnt in France could only be launched with a heavy proportion of American troops shipped across the Atlantic to England.

Basis of U-Boat Effort

PROBABLY that had something to do with the terrific intensification of submarine warfare shortly after the Casablanca conference. Hitler knew that as long as he could sink around a million tons of Allied shipping per month, we would have a tough time transporting and supplying troops overseas and setting up a second front across the Channel in France.

Therefore, it may well be that the current conversations between Roosevelt and Churchill boil down to a question of what percentage of British troops could and should be used to invade France. If the invasion army should be preponderantly British, then the second front operation could start fairly soon.

If on the other hand, the invasion army is to be 60 per cent American and 40 per cent British, or even 50-50, then a second front in France cannot start until we have shipped perhaps half a million men across the North Atlantic. Because of the submarine difficulties, this might well mean that a second front in France could not start this year.

Probably it would also mean that the more immediate second front would be the longer, slower operation through the Mediterranean or up through Italy, both based on North Africa where United States-British troops already are stationed.

So the one clue that Hitler must be watching regarding the Churchill-Roosevelt conferences is the ratio of United States-British troops to be used in France. But that is something he will know only when the second front begins.

High School Cadets Vie in Drills Today

A hard-fought "battle"—testing skill and military prowess of eight high school cadet companies—started yesterday when blue-clad cadets from McKinley marched onto the field at Griffith Stadium in snappy military fashion. The challenge was immediately accepted by companies from Central, Coolidge, Wilson and Western High Schools. Eastern, Roosevelt and Anacostia will demonstrate their skill today in this, the twenty-first annual company competitive drill at the stadium.

More than 33,000 persons are expected to witness presentation of awards. Students will be excused from classes early to see the final competition.

The best noncommissioned cadet officer will be chosen, and Col. William M. Craigie will award gold, silver and bronze medals to the winner and two placing officers before the demonstration drilling starts at noon.

Dry Law Repeal Laid to Poor Enforcement

Repeal of prohibition was called a "double ignoble experiment" last night by 78-year-old Methodist Bishop James Cannon, jr., who told antisaloon leaguers assembled for their thirty-second convention that repeal came because enforcement was poor, not because the law was poor.

Years ago, Bishop Cannon said, he warned there must be proper enforcement of legislation if the liquor traffic is to be "exterminated," as the Anti-Saloon League wishes it to be.

Predicts Greater Victory

Invoking members to elect to public office men who would promote the fight against liquor, the white-haired cleric, who read his speech with spirit from a seat on the choir platform, said that he did not assume the role of prophet but should he live to be 85, he expected to see a line-up to win a greater victory against the liquor traffic than had ever been won before.

Bishop Cannon also read resolutions adopted earlier in the day by the board of trustees. These called upon the President to exercise emergency powers to prohibit sale of liquor to servicemen and women, to establish dry zones around military and industrial areas, to prohibit use of strategic material for liquor, to forbid advertising of liquor while the Nation is at war.

Cites District Data

During the afternoon session, Laura Lindley, research secretary of the league, told members that the District spent twice as much for alcoholic beverages last year as it did for city government. Nationally, she said, every time $7 is spent for the war, $1 is spent for liquor.

Arrests for drunkenness in the District are nearly twice the national rate, she said, pointing out that 64 out of every 100 who go to the District Jail are just plain drunks, and said absenteeism and juvenile delinquency had also been increased by drinking.

NO. 7 of a series of heroic episodes WORLD WAR II

Above the clash of arms in China, heroic overtones are sounding every day. But let no new deed, however brave, drown out the resounding memory of that night the Chinese sergeant staged the "one-man counterattack." Jap pressure on his company had been relentless for the past hundred miles. As the sergeant tried to snatch five minutes' rest three Jap machine guns barked and spat. The sergeant was annoyed. Armed with nothing but his rage and a captured sword, he charged the first machine gun nest. They put three bullets through him but he lopped off three heads with the sword and took over the machine gun. With that one he wiped out the other two. Then he helped himself to a box of Jap hand grenades. With that he knocked off a whole column of ammunition trucks! Returning to his unit he apologized to his superiors, for being away without leave.

★ Nations in arms are nations aroused, and fighting men are men with all their senses heightened. They do things every day that they have never done before, and would never have dreamed of doing, in the slower tempo of their peacetime lives. That's as true of the former clerk from Canton as it is of the former clerk from Canarsie, for no nation has a monopoly on heroism, and men of every creed and color rise to new heights of effort and endurance when confronted with the cruel contingencies of modern war. "Be mindful of the men they were," said a poet of the last war. "Be mindful of the men they will be," we say today. For this time everyone realizes that war teaches the fighting man a lot of new tricks, endows him with abilities as well as strengths, that he never knew he had before. The crucible of conflict will forge not merely tougher men, but better men, too. That's why we consider readership in the armed forces the most important segment of Esquire's total audience today. And that's why, although we are pleased to learn that Esquire regularly reaches a measurable percentage of America's men in arms, we do not presume to attempt to measure the magazine's importance to them, for it would be foolish to try to attribute to any magazine any larger significance for fighting men than may be found in the fact that it serves as a bolster to morale, that it brings a smile to men who need one. That's a small role, surely, in a global war effort. They tell us, though, that there are times out there, when that can be pretty important.

Amazing way to boost Vitality Improve your Looks!

1—Promote the flow of vital digestive juices in the stomach
2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!
THESE two important steps may help you to overcome
Sour Stomach Jerky Nerves
Loss of Appetite Underweight
Digestive Complaints Weakness
Poor Complexion
Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.
A person who is operating on only a 70 to 75% healthy blood volume or a stomach digestive capacity of only 30 to 60% normal is severely handicapped.
At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system... insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.
If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need!
SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up blood strength when deficient ... and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue.

Dangerous Delay

With John L. Lewis again defying the War Labor Board even though agreeing to an extension of the truce in the coal dispute, Congress is still fumbling the issue of anti-strike legislation. There seems to be no doubt as to the desire of a great majority of both Senators and Congressmen to pass some sort of legislation that will strengthen the hand of the WLB in dealing with the recalcitrant chief of the United Mine Workers. But the House has not had a chance to approve the well-reasoned Connally bill, and its Military Affairs Committee has confused the issue by substituting the more drastic Smith bill. That far-reaching measure would probably be vetoed if it should be passed. In the meantime the WLB faces a new crisis without a stroke of legislation to back it up.

Yesterday it was said that Secretary of Labor Perkins was circulating a petition in opposition to the antistrike measure. Whether that opposition is directed at the Connally bill as well as the Smith bill awaiting action by the House is not clear. Perhaps in any event it is of little significance. Considering the failure of the Secretary's policies in preventing strikes to date, no petition from the Department of Labor is likely to be taken very seriously. What is discouraging is the implication that the department is taking a wholly negative attitude when constructive leadership is in great demand.

That attitude intensifies the responsibility of Congress in meeting the issue. And this responsibility can be met, it appears, only by prompt enactment of the Connally bill. The Smith bill was not designed to meet the situation by which the Government is now confronted. It contains some constructive provisions but these are mixed up with drastic penalties that are neither desirable in themselves nor necessary to assure continued mining of coal and production of weapons. This is no time for enactment of general labor legislation anyway. But there is urgent need for enactment of the bill passed by the Senate and approved by the WLB giving that agency and the President all the power they will need to put John Lewis in his place if he again sanctions a strike in the mines. If failure of Congress to pass this bill leads to a new strike in the mines, sponsors of the Smith bill will not find it easy to explain their delaying maneuvers to an impatient public.

German Bishops

Previous manifestoes issued after the annual conferences of German Catholic bishops at Fulda, while remarkably outspoken and vigorous, have confined themselves mainly to protests against the persecution of the church within the Reich. In their latest manifesto, however, the bishops speak openly of the persecution in the occupied countries and warn the Nazis of the "rampart of bitterness and enmity" that is being erected around Germany because of the antireligious fanaticism and terrorism of the Gestapo. This bitterness, it is said, exists not only among natives of those countries who were originally receptive to the idea of the new order, but also to German Catholics settled in these countries before the war.

The plight of German Catholics in Poland, who had so stubbornly resisted the Polonization of their churches and lives, is infinitely worse than under the Poles. In Poland, says the bishops, the Nazis have exhibited "a senseless hatred of everything Christian," churches have been desecrated, shrines destroyed. Everywhere else the story has been much the same, religious property confiscated, religious organizations dissolved and priests and nuns turned loose without support or thrown into concentration camps. In Alsace and Lorraine, Catholics fare worse than under the anticlerical governments of the French Republic. The bishops declare themselves aghast at the political folly of such measures. They remind the government that "one cannot expect to win hard-working and upright people for Germany and at the same time destroy the happiness of their hearts and their source of strength."

Appended to this document, presented as a memorial to various German ministers, is the signature of the aged Cardinal Bertram, Archbishop of Breslau and senior member of the German hierarchy. This is significant in that Cardinal Bertram is reported to have been among those German prelates, who, even after repeated violations of the Concordat of 1933, believed that some modus vivendi between the church and the government was eventually possible, and whose influence is said to have outweighed for a time that of older churchmen such as Cardinal von Faulhaber of Munich and the courageous Graf von Galen of Muenster. As to the exact truth of these reports of long-divided councils among the German hierarchy, it will be impossible to judge accurately until long after the war. But the present document is an unmistakable testimony to the continuing and deepening wedge which Nazi leadership has deliberately driven between itself and a very large but now helpless element of the German population.

Freedom From Want

Two of the Four Freedoms are affected by the world food conference which opens today at Hot Springs. One of them is freedom of speech, the other freedom from want. Of course, the former is not on the agenda, but it has been raised vigorously by the extraordinary ban imposed upon newspaper reporters assigned to the conference. This Government has denied to the world's press access to the delegates beyond a formal meeting or two en masse. There will be a military guard of 200 present, the main duty of which is to keep the delegates and the press apart except under regulated circumstances outside the conference headquarters. How ill the people will be served by such moves will be obvious enough. It is to the liberty of movement of news collectors that the American people owe the service which has made them the best informed people in the world. For the new proscription there seems not the slightest grounds in terms of military security.

This conference is of concern to every man, woman and child in the habitable globe. For the delegates, who come from 43 nations, will discuss in a preliminary way the realization of freedom from want. There will be no difference of opinion on the principle of the need to attain that goal. In principle we are all for it. For he is a hard man who does not subscribe to the gospel of the greatest happiness for the greatest number. Nor are there any physical difficulties any longer in relieving the world from the pangs of hunger. In certain countries the population still presses upon the means of subsistence. And till the dawn of the present century, this was the case with the world as a whole. But, thanks to the rapid and fantastic development of scientific agriculture—which within a century has raised farming out of the methods employed in Biblical times—the world is now operating a surplus economy. This was brought into high relief in the last depression. In an effort to keep up prices, destruction of the fruits of nature was widespread.

It was this spectacle that caused a quickening in the conscience of the civilized world. Some reminders of what we did here at home are given in a current Public Affairs pamphlet on "Freedom From Want." The never-to-be-forgotten slaughter of little pigs in the United States took place at a time when people in other parts of the world were starving. We plowed cotton under when desperately poor Chinese were tying newspapers around their bare bodies to keep out the cold. The contrasts need not be made on a world plane. Poverty in the midst of plowing-under coexisted in America. The contrast gave rise to all kinds of harebrained economic cure-alls, but it also stimulated constructive investigation into ways and means of distributing the world's plenty. Thus the problem was reduced to its basic political and organizational elements.

It is the task of the Hot Springs parley to see whether these elements are manageable. The parley will have the advantage of a great deal of spadework on the subject. Most of it has been done at Geneva. In 1935 the Assembly of the League of Nations devoted a whole session to the need of marrying health and agriculture. Health commissions within the last decade have provided a heap of information on health diets for different peoples. The economics of the satisfaction of basic human wants has likewise been explored. As a result of such reports, national nutrition committees had been set up in 20 different countries by the time war broke out. The war itself has been a mighty forcing house for the realization of freedom from want. The only way to win this peace is to accept the challenge of the economic revolution and unite behind an international program which will expand and share the earth's new bounty instead of restricting it. Such a program will hasten the birth of the new world that's struggling to be born.

Tunisia And Russia

By no means the least important consequence likely to flow from the Allied victory in Tunisia is that it will permit a speeding up of shipments of war supplies from Britain and America to Russia. For with the Mediterranean fully opened to Allied shipping, as it will be before too long, the distance between the Persian Gulf and British and American ports will be reduced very considerably.

This circumstance may prove of decisive importance so far as the developing military situation in Russia is concerned. For there is every expectation that Hitler will attempt another offensive on the Eastern Front this summer. If he does, and if it fails, the last Nazi bid for victory will have faded out, and the way will have been paved for a repetition by the Allies in Europe of what has happened in Tunisia. But for the Red Army to smash a German offensive may and probably will require a stepping up of our aid to Russia.

In the meantime the Russians are making a great effort to destroy the last Nazi foothold in the Caucasus. For two days the German-held forts at Novorossisk have been under fire from Russian artillery. Should Novorossisk be retaken, the Russians will be in a position to reassert naval control of the Black Sea as well as to strengthen their position all along the Eastern Front. Now as ever the fighting in Russia remains of the very greatest importance in the general conduct of the war. Our common struggle is one war, and all our actions from now on must be geared together.

Subversive Legislation

Congressman Kerr, through his inquisition into the political morality of Government employes, seems in a fair way to wrest from his colleague, Martin Dies, the distinction of being known as the American Torquemada. Because of the demonstrated intemperance and unreliability of the Dies Committee, Kerr was put at the head of an appropriations subcommittee to investigate the Dies investigations. His group has now added a third name, that of the Secretary of the Virgin Islands, Robert Morss Lovett, to the list of those it considers unfit for public office.

The Kerr Committee appears to hold the opinion that criticism of the United States Government, or of any phase of American life, amounts to a subversion of the Constitution. One of the grounds cited in its report for calling Dr. Lovett "subversive" was a speech which he delivered in March, 1936. He declared, in part: "I shall vote for Norman Thomas for President because he is the only man who will take the control of this country away from the capitalists and place that control in the hands of the people. . . . The worker today must either be a Communist or a Socialist for neither of the older parties offer any hope. President Roosevelt has been in power for four years and has done nothing. It is still the same old system under which the workers are taxed to help the capitalists get more money and more power."

It is possible to regard Dr. Lovett's views as mistaken without regarding them as treasonable or subversive. The organizations to which he referred were legal political parties. Not quite 200,000 Americans followed his advice to vote for Norman Thomas in 1936. But a great many more agreed with his strictures on President Roosevelt. Paradoxically, the charge most commonly leveled at the President during that campaign, by Alfred Landon and other Republicans, was that he had followed the Socialist platform of 1932. Another outspoken critic, Frank Knox, is now a member of Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet.

The notion that capitalism must be curbed and that the Government must be made responsive to the people was not original with Dr. Lovett. An earlier minority party candidate had declared: "Labor is prior to capital. . . . Capital is only the fruit of labor. . . . Labor is the superior of capital, and deserves much the higher consideration." And the platform on which he ran stated that, "Behind the ostensible government sits enthroned an invisible government owing no allegiance and acknowledging no responsibility to the people. To destroy this invisible government, to dissolve the unholy alliance between corrupt business and corrupt politics, is the first task of the statesmanship of the day."

The candidate who uttered these "subversive" statements was a radical named Theodore Roosevelt who had already served the better part of two terms in the White House. Had the Kerr Committee been functioning in those days, no doubt it would have branded him as unfit for office. The situation might have been awkward, for the committee would probably have been forced to do the same for one of his opponents in the 1912 election, a man named Woodrow Wilson, who shouted from the platform that "The Government of the United States is a foster child of the special interests" and promised to restore it to the people.

The health of this Nation has never been undermined by verbal assaults on its Government. Indeed, these are a source of strength. But legislation which would tend to penalize the frank expression of critical opinions would be genuinely subversive in the most dangerous sense. The Kerr Committee proposes that men be barred from the Federal payroll, not because of any overt act against the Government and not because of any violation of law, but simply because they criticized Government policies. The doctrine is a device to forbid change and to arrest progress. It would subvert the most basic of all our political institutions—freedom of speech.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Yankee Spirit

NEW ENGLAND is living intimately with the war. The huge shipyards at Boston and Portland, the Army and Navy encampments at Camp Edwards, Providence and other places, boom conditions throughout business and industry, urban oil crises and rural gas shortages affect everyone's way of life.

Even the small college towns are drawn into this maelstrom of activity. Staid old Northampton, for example, is occupied by 900 WAVES and SPARS. The old residents heartily approve of them. Smith College itself is so short of staff and funds that the girl students are contributing an hour each day to "college chores." During the summer they are urged to sign up for work on New England's farms.

But fundamentally New England has remained a tight little region of picturesque towns and villages, neat white houses, close-clipped lawns and a well-established social hierarchy that has hardly been touched by this war.

To a Westerner the strength of the Yankeee tradition comes as something of a shock. Here is a caste on a scale unparalleled in America except in the white-Negro relationship of the South. The combined conservatism of the Puritan's descendants and of the Irish Catholics results in a rock-ribbed resistance to change.

Irish-Americans

At the top of the social structure are the original Yankee families, now outnumbered by Americans of more recent vintage. Next are the Irish-Americans, who have risen to political power in Boston and who predominate among skilled workers in most of the industrial cities.

At the base of the pyramid are the French Canadians in Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire and industrial sections of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. In Boston and other cities of southern New England the Italians, Poles, Slavs and others who came over in the 1890's or later, fill the same role. These, like the Irish, are of conservative Catholic stock.

Where the Yankee strain is least diluted—as in Vermont—the war spirit is strongest, for there are no disruptive group antagonisms to mar the picture. Here also the extreme conservatism of the Yankee is most in evidence.

These up-country Yankees oppose the New Deal and its reforms on general principle. They have never liked the 40-hour week law because most Vermont farmers work longer. They think President Roosevelt is too pro-labor. They dislike unions. One small town editor went so far as to say, "John L. Lewis had better not come up this way or some farmer might just take a shot at him."

What the farmers want, according to the county agent of one prosperous county in Vermont, is an end to price control over farm products. They look back to World War I as a sort of Utopian era, when wages and farm prices both soared.

In this war they feel that labor is getting the gravy. I was shown statistics from the New York State College of Agriculture, to prove that in February factory earnings stood at 362 per cent of the 1910 to 1914 level, while the corresponding index of farm prices was only 182. Such figures make Vermonters angry. They point out that although New England produces less food than she consumes, what she does produce is bulky and perishable, so that it is essential to maintain production here.

Social Barriers

In the cities, Yankee conservatism often expresses itself in terms of social barriers against those of recent immigrant stock. Often the bigoted are themselves the children of northern European immigrants; they identify themselves with the original Yankees, and overcorrect for their lack of background by "taking it out" on other immigrant groups—the Italians and Eastern Europeans.

This feeling extends in wartime even to American migrants to New England's industrial areas. I heard one Bridgeport Scandinavian deliver a long diatribe against the "Pennsylvania cowboys" from Scranton and other depressed areas, who have filled up all of the city's available houses.

The conservatism of New England has been constructive, however, in its insistence on the conservation of manpower. Local labor resources are being utilized as far as possible, to prevent excess migration and overexpansion. In upstate Massachusetts nine-tenths of the farmers are said to be doing some industrial work, full or part-time.

Greenfield, a thriving tool and dye-making center, has only a thousand more people than in 1940, although one plant there has increased its working staff by about 3000. Farmers and former unemployed townspeople commute to Greenfield from as far away as southern Vermont; a thousand women are employed in the biggest plant, and white-collar workers spend their evenings in the factory office. Such arrangements should greatly ease the inevitable postwar readjustment.

Breaking The Axis

By Barnet Nover

Germany And An Italian Collapse

IT HAS BEEN A truism for years that Italy is a prisoner of the Reich. As a result of the North African debacle, however, the roles of Germany and Italy have been curiously reversed.

The jailer has become the jailed. The Third Reich is now the prisoner of the Axis. She can only survive if the Axis survives. To be sure, Germany's defeat is now only a matter of time, no matter how long the Axis is kept in being. Her defeat is likely to come swiftly once the Axis is broken; that is, once Italy has been knocked out of the war.

THE IMPORTANCE of the Italian contribution to the war effort of the Axis has been considerable. Mussolini brought his countrymen only defeat, disaster and mounting misery by linking Italy's fortunes to Germany's. But his action was of great help to Hitler.

This Italian help to the Reich falls into five categories:

1. The Italian fleet, whose existence constituted a threat which the British had to offset by maintaining a considerable naval force in the Mediterranean.

2. Bases on the Italian peninsula, in Sicily, Sardinia, Pantelleria and the Dodecanese, thus making the Mediterranean route perilous and costly for Allied shipping.

3. A large Italian military force without which there could have been no Axis campaign in Africa. Lacking that Italian force, Hitler would have had to divert more of his troops for garrison duty than he was actually compelled to do.

4. Some cannon fodder for the Eastern Front and hundreds of thousands of Italian workers for German farms and factories.

5. The output of Italian war plants.

THERE WERE a number of reasons why, despite the fact that it was bound to be a losing venture in the long run, the German high command found it necessary to invest a quarter of a million men, a couple of thousand planes, much shipping and considerable materiel in the Tunisian campaign.

One was the all-important necessity of postponing the opening of a second land front in Europe as long as possible. Another was the desire to gain time in which to build up the defenses of the so-called Fortress of Europe. But a third and vital consideration that must have weighed heavily in German calculations was that Tunisia provided a shield for Italy and its loss would leave Germany's Axis partner completely exposed.

That shield has been snatched out of Axis hands. As a result, Italy's vulnerability to Allied air attacks and consequently to Allied invasion has increased considerably.

By the same token, the German problem of keeping Italy in the war has become immensely more difficult than was the case hitherto.

From every point of view Italy has become a liability to the Reich. But it would be far more of a liability if she collapsed than if she remained even a nominal member of the Axis.

FOR THAT REASON we must discount reports that Hitler is withdrawing the German garrison, Gestapo agents and civilian officials from the peninsula, thus washing his hands of his Italian ally.

Nothing could suit the Allies better, nothing could suit Germany less, than to have that happen. By making Italy even more defenseless than she already is, it would hasten the day of her collapse and then simplify the problem of an Allied invasion of Europe.

The Italian people are utterly weary of war. It is also very clear now that Mussolini and the Fascist regime are no longer strong enough by themselves to keep Italy in the war for any great length of time. So when and if the Germans clear out of Italy the road would be wide open for an Allied occupation of the kingdom.

THIS WOULD mean that from airfields in the Po Valley Allied bombers would be within range of German industrial areas that are still out of reach.

It would mean the opening of the Adriatic to Allied warships, the reactivation of the Jugoslav front on a large scale, a mounting Allied threat to German communications in the all-important Danube Valley, which is the Nazi lifeline to the oil fields of Rumania.

Furthermore, the collapse of Italy would certainly be followed in due course by the collapse of Bulgaria as an Axis satellite and probably by the entry of Turkey into the war on the Allied side.

We can safely assume, therefore, that great as will be the cost, Hitler will continue to do everything possible, as long as possible, to bolster up Italy. When and if he finds it necessary to abandon that effort, that day will mark the beginning of the end of the Third Reich.

German Prisoners

At this time when hundreds of Germans are being captured in Africa, and hundreds of thousands more will be in Europe before the war closes, the matter of harboring these prisoners will be a severe problem for the Allies.

One solution would be to divide these prisoners of war into groups and send them to the various devastated countries where they will be put to work on reconstruction. As Europe is still at war, England will be the first to receive them. They could be transported as needed in empty cargo ships returning to English bases. They will be divided into groups relative to the size of the town or city to be reconstructed. They will live in concentration camps, have their heads shaved, wear work clothes of universal pattern, well marked to designate who they are, be given sufficient food, and not paid. Those refusing to work will have their food withheld until brought round to the seriousness of their offenses; shot if willfully rebellious. It must be remembered these men are prisoners of war, and they be so treated; used but not abused, certainly not pampered.

This segregation and being forced to live and work on foreign soil for the peoples they have despoiled will not only give them the needed lesson, but will keep them from living in their own country, where they would be only too ready to forget the past and begin building anew plans to wreak new vengeance on the world.

Very truly yours,
EBEN F. COMINS.

Easter Seals

The Seal Sale Committee of the District of Columbia Society for Crippled Children would like to announce through your public letter box, that this organization desires to give heartfelt thanks to the contributors for their generous support of this year's Easter Seal Sale, to make public the total contribution and outline of our program for the welfare of the crippled which their support makes possible. Before we are able to do this, however, it is necessary that we hear from those persons to whom Easter Seals were mailed, who have not yet made a return.

If the generosity of those from whom we are still to hear approaches that of the contributors from whom we have already heard, the organization will be able to continue its program of prevention, and to extend its services to meet the increasing needs of the crippled in this community. For these reasons, we would like to request as early a return as possible from recipients of Easter Seals.

Cordially yours,
ALBERT W. HOWARD,
Seal Sale Chairman.

Enforced World Peace

The meaning of the term "international police force" is clear to the advocates generally of enforced world peace, but public utterances from opponents, based upon misunderstanding if not the will to deceive, are confusing many minds concerning the duties of such a force.

It never was the intention of proponents of an international police force that it should meddle in the internal affairs of nations. International public opinion, friendly negotiation, such as is provided for in the Covenant of the League of Nations, and, if necessary, severance of diplomatic relations and use of the economic boycott, usually can compel the correction of intolerable conditions within states.

The sole purpose of an international police force would be to discourage aggression against nations by punishing aggressor nations.

Had an international police force existed when Japan invaded Manchuria, when Italy invaded Ethiopia, or when Germany invaded Austria or Czecho-Slovakia or Poland, none of those invasions, in all probability, would have been attempted, and, if any were, the aggressors would have been quickly checkmated and appropriately punished.

The Covenant of the League of Nations provided for collective armed action against aggressor nations, but the League, notwithstanding that more than 50 nations joined it, lacked two vital elements:

1. Police power dispatchable automatically upon receipt of proof of aggression.

2. The membership of the most powerful nation on earth—the United States of America.

The punishment of the three major aggressors in the second World War, Germany, Italy and Japan, must greatly exceed disarmament. Germany was disarmed a quarter of a century ago but within a generation built another formidable war machine. Police power in some dependable form obviously must be exercised in those three countries for many years after they unconditionally surrender.

Clinical Diagnosis

I.

Rommel isn't feeling well—
He's had a little sinking spell;
He sank from old El Alamein
Far back across the German Rhine;
His pulse is very, very fleet
From trying to outrun his feet—
His tongue is rather badly coated
With boasts that were too widely quoted.

II.

Rommel is feeling pretty sick—
He has no oomph, he has no kick.
(He felt okay when near the Nile—
But was back a little while!)
He lacks the old-time vim and pep—
There is no "goose" now in his step;
He's suffering from many aches
And has the intermittent "shakes."

III.

Rommel isn't what he was—
His ears both hear a constant buzz;
(His vision is defective now,
But he has seen enough, and how!)
He's suffering from lack of starches
And from some badly fallen arches;
His heart is giving lots of trouble
From going backward "on the double."

IV.

Rommel is feeling pretty low—
It's desert trouble, strictly sol
He passes very restless nights
From dreams about continued flights;
The thing that makes him extra ill
Is that he took that run-out pill;
He isn't very close to death—
It's just that he is out of breath.

V.

Rommel gets feeling worse and worse
From victories won in reverse;
He has the chills and feels quite cold
(The trouble is his brakes don't hold);
His illness seems to set new styles—
It covers some 2000 miles;
He had a fever extra hot—
(The more he ran the worse he got!)

L'ENVOI

Rommel's feeling extra low
(He is, for Hitler tells him sol)
In bed he feverishly tosses
And gets some extra iron crosses;
He's won one now for "unique merit,"
This desert fox or desert ferret;
He lies abed beneath the cover
And waits for Hitler's, "Hey, move over!"

Famous Last Words: Marshal Goering, what is your opinion on the matter of air power in modern war?

Starling Traits

"A Real Bird Lover" in The Post as of May 13, says that: "The starling is a meek bird and unknown to those who do not take an interest in him." Bird Lover claims that the blackbird is the true culprit and that the starling has acquired a bad name because most people do not know enough about birds to distinguish between them.

I came across another recommendation of the starling in reviewing an old tale about the sons of William the Conqueror. William, wishing to determine which of his three sons would make the best king, consulted his soothsayers. Their method of finding out was to ask the three boys the following question. Their answers were to give them their royal placement. "If, instead of being a boy, it had pleased God to make you a bird, what kind of a bird would you rather be?"

Robert, the eldest, answered: "A hawk, because no other bird reminds one so much of a bold and gallant knight."

William Rufus, the second son, answered: "An eagle, because it is strong and brave and is feared by all other birds and is therefore king of them all.

Henry Beau-Clere (handsome scholar) the third son, answered: "A starling, because it is good-mannered and kind and a joy to everyone who sees it. And it never tries to rob or abuse its neighbors."

The soothsayers chose Henry. More power to soothsayers if they have that kind of sense!

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Profitable Victory

THERE would be something in the notion that the conduct of the war can be left entirely in the hands of the professionals if it were true that all the professionals take the same view of how to conduct it. But rarely in any great war, and certainly not in this one, has there been one agreed body of professional military opinion which civilian leaders and the enlightened public must follow or, at the risk of disaster, overule. The fact of the matter is that in the camp of our enemies and in our own, there are now and have been serious differences of professional military opinion which some higher authority must arbitrate and reconcile.

LIPPMANN

There is no way of avoiding such decisions. When they are made, we must not confuse ourselves by thinking that civilians have imposed their views on professionals. What the civilians have to do is to decide which of the professionals they will back.

DECISIONS of this kind are hard. But in reaching them we now have something more than speculative opinion in a vacuum to guide us: we have the actual experience of battle in which theories, plans, and the judgment of men have been tested. This experience shows that thus far the fundamental strategic decision has been correct.

WHAT WAS the decision and how do we know that it has been correct? The decision was to launch the first counter-offensive against the enemy alliance by a converging movement from Egypt in the east and from Morocco and Algeria in the west. Other alternatives were proposed. There were some who wished to begin the counter-offensive in the South Pacific, some from Australia and others from the smaller island bases; some to begin it in India; others to begin it by an invasion of the European Continent from England; others who wished to concentrate entirely on the bombing of Germany from England.

For each of these proposals there was strong professional as well as powerful political pressure. Our Navy had one view, our airforce another. There was a view held by our ground forces. There were an Australian view and at least two Chinese views. There was Stalin's view of last year on the second front. The problem was to make the best choice among all these choices—to combine the best features of many of them so as to obtain the maximum result at the minimum cost.

THERE can be no serious argument today that the Churchill-Roosevelt decision was the soundest which could have been made. The proof lies in the fact that our forces have not only won a resounding victory but that they emerge from the campaign ever so much stronger than they were when they began. This is in the full meaning of the term a strategic victory. It is a very different kind of victory from one in which one army is gradually worn down by attrition—until it is a little more exhausted than the other.

In North Africa a crack German and a large Italian army, with all their equipment, have surrendered. Let us say there are 170,000 of them. At the same time, we have brought into being a wholly new Allied army that did not exist before, a French army of over 300,000 excellent men. Thus we stand today at the gates of Italy and of the Balkans relatively stronger by half a million seasoned troops than we were before Roosevelt and Churchill took the decision to reinforce Alexander and Montgomery and to send out Eisenhower. This is victory which pays real dividends, Hitler and Mussolini must find at least another half a million men merely in order to be relatively as strong as they were before.

AND THIS leaves out of all account the fact that the power of our airforce is multiplied many times because it is within easy reach of the whole of Italy; that our shipping resources are multiplied because we have shortened by eight or nine thousand miles one of the chief convoy routes; that our combined naval power is multiplied because the Italian navy has been cornered up the Adriatic.

Above all, it leaves out of account the great fact that the same grand operation can be repeated with good hope of success: namely, that as we advance into Europe we shall actually grow stronger, rather than that we shall bleed ourselves in an exhausting war of attrition. The African campaign knocked out an Axis army and gave us a new French army. A campaign which knocked Italy out of the war would not only knock out Italy. The Italians occupy southeastern France and a large part of the Balkans: if Italy is reduced, Hitler must bring troops from some other front to defend those places. Again, as we move forward, we shall become relatively stronger, and we shall not be fighting the kind of campaign which, even if it brings victory, ends in exhaustion.

The same principle applies in the Balkans. There too, as we advance, we shall raise up new allied armies of seasoned, ardent men. There is a Yugoslav army hidden in the hills and submerged under the Axis occupation. There is a Greek army on the mainland and in the islands. There may be a Bulgarian army. And once the campaign is in motion, there is almost certainly a Turkish army.

THIS IS the way to conduct war, and we should be forever grateful to the men who had the insight, the imagination and the resolution to take the fundamental decisions which, in the short space of six months, have revolutionized to our advantage the whole shape of the whole global war.

By the practical test of strategically profitable success in actual warfare, they have earned the right to have their judgment trusted by the governments and peoples of the United Nations. This is the only test which counts in any judgment which laymen can make about their decisions for the future.

TVA Case Award Cut

By Edward H. Higgs

Condemnation Ruling

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that the United States, in taking land for public use, does not have to pay compensation for any potential profits the landowner hoped to obtain through private development of water power.

The decision reduced—in an amount yet to be determined—a Fourth Federal Circuit Court award of approximately one million dollars to W. V. N. Powellson, sole stockholder of the Southern States Power Co., for 12,679 acres of land taken over by the Tennessee Valley Authority for construction of the Hiwasee Dam and other purposes in North Carolina. The TVA declared the award was excessive.

Powellson had contended that the compensation should be based not only upon the value of the land but also upon the fact that he could acquire, under a grant of eminent domain from the State of North Carolina, adjoining lands on which a four-dam hydroelectric system could be built.

Justice Douglas' opinion held that the power of eminent domain is "not a personal privilege" but "a special authority impressed with a public character to be utilized for a public end," and added that "an award based on the value of that privilege would be an appropriation of public authority to a wholly private end."

In other actions, the court:

Refused to review a decision of the Federal Circuit Court at San Francisco that Japanese born in the United States are American citizens and entitled to vote. John T. Regan of San Francisco challenged the ruling.

Ruled that a radio station whose interests will be adversely affected by a Federal Communication Commission grant of additional privileges to another station may intervene in the proceedings and contest the FCC action.

Refused for a second time to review a decision approving a plan for the reorganization of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway Co. worked out by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Agreed to review a decision which set aside an order of the Federal Power Commission directing the Hope Natural Gas Co. to reduce its rates by $3,609,857 annually on natural gas consumed in Cleveland and Akron, Ohio, and in Pennsylvania.

Refused to review a National Labor Relations Board order directing the Botany Worsted Mills of Passaic, N. J., to bargain collectively with the C. I. O. Textile Workers Union of America as the agent of 32 to 42 sorters and trappers employed by the company.

30 Million Tires in '44

But None For Pleasure, Jeffers Says

Every plant in the synthetic rubber program will be completed by the end of this year, Rubber Director William M. Jeffers reported yesterday, but "the non-essential driver cannot expect new tires for a long time."

Jeffers, in his third progress report, said essential drivers would get 12 million new tires this year—five million synthetics and seven million pre-Pearl Harbor tires—and 30 million new tires in 1944.

Jeffers' implication that mileage rationing might be prolonged through 1944 was seen in his assertion that 30 million tires is "the probable minimum replacement program that the country can get by with" in 1944, even by "keeping present conservation measures."

"By 1944 the country will have gone two years with less than one-quarter of the normal replacement of tires and with no new cars," he said. "This accumulated deficit indicates that new tires must be provided to keep the country moving."

"Present estimates," he added, "indicate a greater production of synthetic rubber in 1943 and a greater amount of natural crude rubber arriving from foreign countries than was indicated in my previous report of progress."

Because of this and some paring of demands, the Nation's rubber stock pile at the end of this year—the danger period of the whole rubber program—will be about 40,000 tons higher than was estimated in mid-February, Jeffers said. It will contain 142,000 tons.

"Looking forward to 1944, all of the synthetic plants will be in production, providing over 750,000 long tons. . . . It is also expected that in 1944 at least 74,000 tons of new crude imports will be available to this country."

The 750,000 tons is the equivalent of a heavy year's consumption of rubber in peacetime.

Job Freeze Effective Thursday

Washington's job freeze plan will become effective not later than Thursday, Leo B. Wertz, WMC acting regional director, announced yesterday.

The local plan already has the tentative approval of the regional director, he indicated.

It embraces substantially the "interim procedure," announced as a working policy by Area Director R. B. Deschner last Thursday. The new local plan is in Deschner's office where final editing and phrasing is under way, according to G. A. Beekman, Deschner's assistant.

The area director was ill at his home yesterday.

Anticipates No Conflicts

"The plan will be sent on through when it is brought to my office," Werts explained. "I know what it contains and anticipate no conflicts with Region IV plans currently in operation in the District area."

Region IV includes the District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland, West Virginia and North Carolina.

"A 48-hour week, although not necessarily included in the area program to be submitted, is already effective under the region plan and will remain in force when the local policy is adopted," he said.

With area plans already operating and approved in Maryland and the Hampton Roads area in Virginia, the District of Columbia area plan will be the next adopted, Director Werts said.

Other sections of Region IV will submit local area plans for approval to region headquarters here as quickly as local labor-management groups work them out, he said.

"The labor stabilization plan is not difficult to understand," Werts said. "It is nice that the newspapers in Washington have given the matter publicity."

Briefly the movement of workers in esential war work is discouraged by the overall plan.

Local or area plans must conform with regional plane and workers in order to leave their employer must secure statements of availability from either their employer or the United States Employment Service.

Statements may be granted for (1) discharge by last employer, (2) discharge or suspension for indefinite time,, or for period of seven days or more, (3) present employer failing to utilize worker at his highest skill or not employing him full time, (4) compelling personal reasons.

Gas Banned On Vacation

Gloom For Motorists

With stocks of gasoline in the city low and getting lower, OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown yesterday added to the gloom of motorists by banning the use of gasoline for vacation trips, except that which can be made on "A" coupons.

The order was issued in an effort to conserve already low stocks of gasoline and rubber, the OPA explained.

Brown said he was reluctant to impose the ban in view of the need for recreation and relaxation among war workers but saw no other way out.

Motorists who have saved their "A" coupons for a vacation trip will be in a position to drive 360 miles on their holiday, if they so desire, an OPA official said.

An accurate check on the gasoline supplies of Washington's many service stations was not possible, yesterday, but a spokesman for the retail dealers said "many" had closed.

"I do not believe that we will be entirely out of gasoline at any time," he said.

He did believe that most motorists would be compelled to shop around among several stations before they could get their gasoline, however.

Blast Kills Six On Navy Craft

Morehead City, N. C., May 17 (INS).—Six persons were killed and seven injured today in an explosion aboard a small naval vessel at port terminal, Morehead City. The names of the casualties have been withheld by the Navy pending notification of next of kin.

G.O.P. Group Names Casey Publicity Head

Chicago, May 17 (AP).—Leo Casey was appointed publicity director of the Republican Postwar Policy Association today.

Casey was publicity director of the New York World's Fair, and did similar work for the Republican Party and various candidates, including Alf M. Landon's presidential campaign in 1936 and Thomas E. Dewey's first campaign for Governor of New York.

He was publicity director of the Republican National Committee in 1937 and part of 1938.

Drive Opened on Use of Loose Coupons

An intensified drive against users of loose gasoline ration coupons and dealers who accept them was announced yesterday by the District Office of Price Administration in an effort to conserve as much as possible of Washington's waning supply of gasoline.

Coupons detached by anyone except the station attendant who makes the sale are illegal and many stations have been lax in complying with the regulation, the OPA pointed out.

Meanwhile rationing officials in Narragansett, R. I., have reported the license numbers of several District automobiles seen at the race track there to the local office for investigation. Owners and trainers of race horses are considered as being at the track on legitimate business, but all others will be checked, OPA said.

In the "no snooping" drive against nonessential travel, OPA inspectors will begin checking speedometers of suspected automobiles against the mileage recorded on their tire inspection forms to ascertain whether the owner is using more than his allotted amount of fuel.

OPA also is receiving reports from other distant cities of Washington motorists who are traveling on more than their legal quotas of gasoline and immediate action will be taken, a spokesman said.

District Placed In Zone C-1 for Next Winter's Oil

The Office of Price Administration announced numerous changes yesterday in its thermal zones for next winter's fuel oil rationing to permit closer adjustment of rations to supply and to weather conditions.

In the East Coast and Northwest area, Zones A, B, C will be divided by a North-South line between Districts 1 and 2 as set up by the Petroleum Administration.

Zone C-1 will include Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia and West Virginia.

Zone C-2 will include Kentucky lower Ohio, lower Indiana, lower Missouri and lower Kansas.

The breaking up of large areas into smaller units, OPA said, will make it easier to put into effect adjustments required by a severe cold spell in any locality.

History Repeats Itself, But Not Always in Full

'Mission to Moscow' Recalls Predecessor; 'Prelude to War' to Have Local Preview; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

HISTORY does not always repeat itself. At least in its entirety. Take the case of the Warner Brothers' ambassadorial films, for example. To take them, it will be necessary to span a quarter-century.

JOSEPH E. DAVIES

Back in the spring of 1918, the Freres Warner came into the market with a widely heralded predecessor to "Mission to Moscow," which devoted itself to what former Ambassador James W. Gerard denominated "My Four Years in Germany." It was of as immediate interest then as "Mission to Moscow" is now and, as I recall it, was a sensational box-office attraction everywhere in the country—except Washington. It was through no fault of its own that it failed to click here.

As a matter of fact, "My Four Years in Germany" was looked upon as such a sure-fire attraction that when Tom Moore, one of Washington's pioneer exhibitors, secured the State rights to the picture in this territory, he forthwith staged an invitational preview that packed Central High School Auditorium to the rafters, and then took over Poli's Theater, with its huge capacity, for a two-a-day, "road show" engagement at stiffly tilted prices.

Having given the film away free, gratis, for nothing to precisely the audience that would have lent official, social and military luster to its public premiere, the red fire had burned itself completely out before the picture could get itself opened for public pelf at Fifteenth and the Avenue. The result was a gross week of about $1900 and bitter disappointment all around that an ostensibly long-run film had petered out at the end of seven days.

When "Mission to Moscow" opens at the Earle on May 28, it will do more than $1900 the first few hours the box-office is open. Wait and see.

Otherwise, in the case of "Mission," history bids rather better than fair to preserve its tradition. It has already repeated once for the Warners and promises to again.. No one has forgotten that the momentous Roosevelt-Churchill conference at Casablanca gave "Casablanca" a terrific impetus at the ticket wicket. It is fresh in mind, too, that just as people were beginning to say that the bombing of a Japanese convoy out of the water for the climax of "Air Force" was a shade on the side of extravagantly wishful thinking, the United States forces up and do exactly that in the South Pacific, giving "Air Force" all the authenticity of a preview of history and the headlines. Now, just as "Mission to Moscow" is about the burst into public view, the Hon. Joseph E. Davies is on another trek to Moscow that will have the picture in the front of every mind for weeks to come. One hardly believes that the United States Government has been retained as publicity department for Warner Pictures—especially since May 28 was announced as the Washington premiere date for "Mission" as long ago as when Charlie Einfeld, director of Warner advertising and publicity, was in town arranging the press preview at the Earle some weeks back. What seems to have happened is that the Burbank studios have set up their production schedule with such acumen as to make their pictures coincide with the news with almost uncanny clairvoyance.

Government Has One of Its Owne

A wire from Cochairman Carter T. Barron announces that the War Activities Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, in cooperation with the OWI and the War Department, will hold a premiere showing of "Prelude to War" in Loew's Columbia Theater on Wednesday night, May 26, at 8:45 o'clock, preliminary to its regular public showing at that house beginning the next day. This, it will be recalled, is the first of the Frank Capra "orientation" films devised primarily as part of the Army training of selectees. After having been shown to all branches of the armed forces, it was deemed by the authorities of sufficient interest and value to be shown as part of the regular bills in the commercial theater. On public reaction to this subject will depend the future course with regard to half a dozen other similar films, either completed or in the making, put together under Major Capra's supervision.

A week or so ago, when the mercury betrayed a timorous inclination to climb a little nearer the top of the thermometer, we addressed an eager inquiry to Manager Len Schloss as to just when he was going to open the Crystal Pool out at Glen Echo Park. Return mail brought the answer in the form of proofs of an expansive ad emblazoning May 22 as the date. That would be Saturday, unless I'm looking at the wrong calendar. In the view of many, next to an ocean the Crystal Pool comes first.

A handful of enlisted men at Bolling Field Army Air Base have gone and whipped themselves up something called "Look at Us Now" for presentation at the Post Gymnasium tomorrow and Thursday nights. Sounds as if they might have something there. Conceived by Corpl. Donald Benjamin of Pittsburgh, former member of the Pittsburgh Players and a star pupil of Gene Kelly, the show has had the benefit of ministrations by Technical Sergt. Don Richmond, former arranger and saxophonist with Jimmy Dorsey; Sergt. Henry "Dude" Ranch, who leaped from the Bob Chester and Dick Stabile orchestras to the Air Forces Band; Sergt. Virgil Fox, nationally known organist; Pvt. Frank Ligouri, formerly of Olsen and Johnson's "Sons o' Fun," and numerous other professionals and semipros now in uniform. The boys also have kicked in with an original score and a chorus of "WAACS." A 17-piece section of the Air Forces Band will occupy the orchestra pit. All for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Please-Pass-the-Beer-and-Pretzels Note

Had you heard that the Willard Roof will be breaking out soon again with another season of old-time melodramas, with olio, such as were so popular last summer, and with Dick Midgely once more in the saddle? Well, you have now.

Her Singing Adds to the Merrymaking

gifted chanteuse, whose vocal contributions are featured in "The Merry Makers," the 12-act vaudeville-revue which last night opened a two-week engagement in the National Theater. Jay C. Flippen, Sid Marion, Think-a-Drink Hoffman and a wide variety of other specialists also are prominent in this spring frolic, designed as the precursor of numerous others

'The Merrymakers,' at National, Live Boisterously Up to Title

By Nelson B. Bell

Comprised of a dozen acts that run up a total of 14 or 15 "turns" "The Merrymakers" arrived in the National Theater last night and put on a vaudeville show that pretty thoroughly lived up to the title.

The audience, by every visible and audible sign, was made merry throughout the evening by a succession of skits and specialties that ranged from expert unicycling, through the marvelous marionetting of the Salici Puppets and the mystifying bartending of Think-a-Drink Hoffman to the rowdy buffoonery of Sid Marion and Cliff "Sharlie" Hall and The Three Sailors.

With the ribald and rollicking Jay C. Flippen as master of ceremonies, the two parts of the entertainment, fore and aft the intermission, found no time to pause to catch their breath or permit the customers to catch theirs. The two hours moved swiftly and so did most of the acts.

There are none of the decorations of musical comedy or revue to embellish the manner of "The Merrymakers'" presentation. With the last note of the "overture" by Ray Kavanaugh and his orchestra—largely of local origin—Maysy and Brach begin to spin around the stage on their unicycles and perform a series of gymnastic and juggling feats on single wheels, that are slightly amazing. Especially the one in which Mr. Brach maintains his equilibrium high up in the flyloft while whirling a dozen hoops in that many different directions without breaking his neck.

Flippen Cracks the Whip

Taking over at this point, Mr. Flippen recounts a few of his more ancient wheezes, preliminary to introducing Sid Marion and Cliff Hall in a bit of cross-fire and then Jane Fraser and the Roberts Sisters in a tricky, three-pedestal tap dance routine made famous and familiar by the Nicholas Brothers, only because Miss Fraser and her associates didn't get there first. With Douglas-Keaton and Marie Windsor, a handsome foil for their comedy, assisting, Marion and Hall miraculously score a laughting hit with "The Old Army Game," executed with lemons and punctuated with the old money-changing bit, that every seasoned theatergoer has seen at least 2000 times and laughed at every time.

The Three Sailors, with as infallible a brand of low-comedy nonsense as was ever devised, keep the roistering rolling to a burlesque rope-skipping dance finale that took them off to one of the soundest hits of the evening.

Then another glimpse or two of Miss Windsor, and Mr. Hoffman and his baffling manipulation of the cocktail shaker, whereby any member of the audience is served any drink he desires, all out of the same receptacle.

This Mr. Hoffman has contrived himself a more bewildering specialty than Cardini's with all those cigarettes. As we recited Sunday, we have seen him perform the same tricks in private and still have no notion of how it is done. And to at least one immature and unschooled taste, his aperitifs possess every semblance of the real thing.

Second Half Superior

Following the mass exodus to the lobby, those Salici Puppets, already familiar to the Capital from many previous appearances here, again fascinate the pewholders with their miniature revue that continues to feature the concert pianist and diva, singing to flute accompaniment, as its piece de resistance. A remarkable coordination of movement and music.

It is in the second half, too, that Marion and Hall, with a considerable supporting cast recruited from the other acts put on their "Stand In" skit, a legitimately funny parody on picture-making in Hollywood, in which the long-suffering Mr. Marion is continuously and hilariously on the receiving end of everything from a mauling to a custard pie applied in the most approved Mack Sennett manner.

It is along here, likewise, that Mr. Flippen tosses in his singing monologue and Harris and Shore offer the most ridiculous of all the travesties on the "art" of ballroom and every other kind of dancing, and Susan Miller is revealed as an eye-filliing singer with a particularly winning way with a song.

The final chapter is written to the goings-on with "The Crazy House," another of the Marion & Hall burlesque skits that is as perfect a "chaser act" as could possibly be hit upon. It would empty practically any theater, anywhere, if those out front weren't so busy roaring at it.

Fun Without Fripperies

Don't go to the National this week or next expecting to be dazzled by elaborate settings and gorgeous costuming. There isn't any. Just a straight variety show, the way it was presented in the old days before B. F. Keith's, New York's Palace and the other more ornate temples of the two-a-day began to aim at the pretentiousness of bigtime production.

A former President of the United States, whose favorite form of amusement was vaudeville, often explained that he liked it because there was bound to be something he enjoyed on every bill. If this act didn't suit, the next one probably would.

That's the way it is with "The Merrymakers."

—LEONARD LYONS—

Broadway Gazette

New York, May 17.

WAR DEPT.: Lieut. Col. Pierpont Morgan Hamilton was one of the heroes of the invasion of Africa. He was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor. He and his superior officer landed at Port Ly Autey, to convince the French commissioner that resistance was useless. Hamilton's superior officer was killed, and he proceeded alone. He was taken to the French headquarters, and was detained there for two and one-half days, while the commissioner stalled him, and the battle continued . . . Hamilton suddenly realized that he was in a house which he himself had marked for destruction. Before the attack began, Hamilton had gone over the maps and instructed the officers about the special targets. On the map of the town, Hamilton put a red cross on this very site, directing that this place, French headquarters, must be hit. Now he was in this building . . . He kept his silence, and after two and one-half days the French released him. The building, somehow, wasn't hit.

FASHIONS: Lisle Bell, of the Herald Tribune, lives in an apartment at 200 East Sixty-third Street. From his windows he can see the home of Edward L. Bernays, the public relations man, at No. 163, and the former Rutherford Vanderbilt home at No. 153, which Gypsy Rose Lee just purchased . . . Last week Bernays had some excavation work done in front of his home, where new pipes were being laid. Bell watched the men digging, and sent a note to Bernays: "If you're trying to dig up something for Miss Lee to wear, that's being TOO neighborly."

BUILDING DEPT.: This is the newest tale from Norway: A group of Norwegian boys watched Nazi soldiers digging hurried fortifications to forestall attempts at invasion. The Nazis dug their trenches deeper and deeper . . . "This is our Fuehrer's latest strategy," their officer told one Norwegian boy—who watched them digging still deeper and deeper, and replied: "Is THAT your newest strategy—to attack Chiang Kai-shek from the rear?"

THEATER DEPT.: At 10:30 each night, at Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize play, "The Skin of Our Teeth," actors parade and recite quotations from Aristotle, Spinoza, Plato, etc. The Plato quotation is recited at 10:37 . . . The quotations from Aristotle and Spinoza are accurate—but the one from Plato isn't. Wilder was about to be commissioned into the Army when he finished writing this scene. He quickly read the Dialogues of Plato, his "Laws" and "Symposium," but could find no appropriate quotation. And so he wrote something which sounded as if it were a quotation from Plato, put the philosopher's name to it—and went off into the Army.

DRAMA DEPT.: Giovanni, the sleight-of-hand artist who once lifted President Roosevelt's gold watch and J. Edgar Hoover's wallet at a White House function, also has entertained Winston Churchill. The performance took place at Eton Hall, in London, where Churchill was the guest of the Duke of Westminster. Giovanni lifted the Duke's wrist watch, and then removed the suspenders from the unsuspecting Churchill . . . "Serves me right," said Churchill, reaching for his trousers. "People who aren't aware of a danger so imminent, sometimes deserve to lose their pants."

LOCAL NEWS: Tommy Dorsey and his manager have served the necessary legal papers on the proprietor of the Terrace Room in Newark, where Frank Sinatra now is singing, and on the officials of the Paramount, where Sinatra will be featured soon, attaching part of his salary. Dorsey attached 33 1/3 per cent of the salary, while his manager attached 10 per cent. This is by virtue of an old contract Sinatra signed before his remarkable rise . . . The Folies Bergere will open in N. Y. on May 27 . . . Artie Shaw, the bandleader, has left his post in Pearl Harbor, for an assignment aboard a battleship . . . Lepke, awaiting execution, still is in the Federal House of Detention.

SOCIAL NOTES: Walter Duranty visited Miriam Hopkins at her house. They discussed Emerson's Essay on Friendship. As they were descending to the dining room, Duranty tripped and started to fall. Miss Hopkins, mindful of Duranty's old injury, fell in front of him, breaking his fall. They rolled down the steps, and neither was hurt . . . They got up, and walked into the dining room, without mentioning the fall. "As I was saying," Duranty continued, "Emerson's Essay on Friendship . . ."

ROMANCE DEPT.: Stanley Baldwin's son tells this story of the day his sister went out with a young man who wanted to marry her. She asked her mother for advice, in case the young man should want to kiss her . . . "Do what I did," said her mother, reminiscing of the beginning of her romance with the man who was to become Prime Minister, "Just close your eyes and think of England."

A Tent in Central Park, Perhaps?

Hollywood, Calif., May 17.—Joan Crawford has a six-month leave of absence to do a play in New York, but can't get accommodations because she won't travel without her entire family. That means husband, children, nurses, etc. . . . A contract is about to be signed by Buddy De Sylva with Joan Caulfield, who, played in "Kiss and Tell" in New York, to star in "Our Hearts Were Young and Gay." Buddy wired Cornelia Skinner to go take a look at her and report. Cornelia will when she arrives here Monday to play the heavy in "The Uninvited."

Bonita Granville's neighbor, Geraldine Smithson, former writer now working at Lockheed, between shifts did "Plane Jane" about one of the girls who falls in love with her boss. Charles Koerner may buy it as a starring vehicle for Bonita. . . . Akim Tamiroff, on his camp tour, using many of Bob Hope's old routines. He didn't think them funny, and wondered why the soldiers laughed. Guess he's never listened to his accent. . . . Now that Rudy Vallee has been upped to a full lieutenant, there's a plan afoot for him to take his Coast Guard band on a tour of South America. Sergt. Jack Briggs transferred to Camp Elliott, which is much nearer Ginger Rogers' house in La Jolla, where she'll spend the summer.

Nice Guy

It doesn't always follow that relatives get the best of it inside a studio. Freddie Wilcox, Nick Schenck's brother-in-law, directed that delightful picture, "Lassie Comes Home," and I'll be darned if he isn't still working for the same pay [and a small one] he got five years ago. He's been at Metro-Goldwyn for 14 years, and any studio in town would triple his present wage, but his loyalty keeps him tied. . . . Mme. Chiang Kai-sheck has moved on to Canada, winning their citizens as she did ours, hands down. . . . Reggie Gardiner goes romantic and actually gets the girl in "Greenwich Village."

Unhappy Coincidence

John Decker, after previewing new paintings and his marvelous death mask of John Barrymore, collapsed and was taken to the same room in the hospital which John occupied. They hope, after a transfusion, Decker will be on the mend. . . . His sidekick, Gene Fowler, is mighty ill, too—suffering from heart and an appendicitis attack. . . . Now that the FCC, backed by the Supreme Court, has had its way with radio, I'm wondering if Paramount won't put in another bid for the Blue network. They seem to be more air-minded than our other producers, and they've made greater strides in television, which is just around the corner when war's ended. . . . Rosalind Russell's baby is named Carl Lance Brisson. Roz calls him Lance, which is the name of Barbara Hutton's son. . . . Brian Donlevy's name in "America" is Stefan Dangosbilichek. . . . # Star's 'Visit' Diverts Marines

Hollywood.—What started out as an informal visit turned into a personal appearance tour for Eleanor Powell.

When the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer dancing star entrained for San Diego to visit Glenn Ford, now a Marine in boot camp, she expected an uneventful trip. Occurrences made her journey quite the contrary.

After passing an afternoon with Ford and personally meeting each of his fellow Marines in camp, Eleanor learned her train back to Los Angeles had been delayed. She was prevailed upon to make an appearance at San Diego's USO center.

Capital Slips To 7th Place In Building

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington slipped to seventh place nationally in volume of building permits for the first four months this year, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported yesterday.

Local permits totaled $4,840,100 in the period compared with $11,734,316 in the same four months last year.

The decline was general throughout the Nation. The aggregate value of building permits in 215 cities was $42,031,511, down 61.7 per cent from a year ago and 70.3 per cent less than the same period of 1941.

While building permit valuations expanded quite sharply during April, as compared with March, widespread declines from a year ago continued to be recorded throughout most sections of the country. The April aggregate for 215 cities amounted to $49,700,000, according to the Dun & Bradstreet survey. This represented a rise of 3.1 per cent above the March figure, but was 57.6 per cent under the April, 1942, total.

Among the 20 leading cities, Detroit moved to the top of the list in volume of building permits for the first four months. Comparative figures follow:

This Morning: Battle of Tunisia Brings Sadness and Pride to Hilltop

With Shirley Povich

Somewhere among the poets' work there must be a couplet about war that would express the emotions at Georgetown University this week. Hard upon news of tragedy, came glory to the Hilltop.

On the same battlefield where Georgetown's Johnny Burke fell in Africa, the twenty-first gold star in the school's World War II battle flag, another Georgetown man was winning the commendation of a United States commanding general.

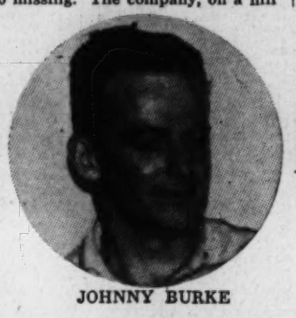
POVICH

They were both members of Georgetown's golf teams, Burke, the intercollegiate champion, and Dick Harris, who has captained a Georgetown team. "Killed in action on the Central African front," was the War Department message to the parents of Johnny Burke, second lieutenant in infantry. That meant Tunisia.

Meanwhile in another sector of the Tunisian campaign, Dick Harris fought and lived. Dick is the son of the president of the United States Lines. At the Hilltop he was a football and track man, but they knew him best as a golfer. Not a national collegiate champion like Burke, the Providence lad, but important enough to captain the golf team.

On the morning of May 2, Harris was an infantry lieutenant. The big push in Tunisia toward Mateur was on. Later that day, the commanding general in that sector drove to regimental headquarters and sought out Lieutenant Harris. Said the general, simply, "Nice work, CAPTAIN." Harris learned the general was promoting him on the spot.

From Maj. Robert Cullis of Boston, Georgetown has learned details of the action that brought Dick Harris promotion to a captaincy. It was a battle on May 1, just before dawn when the unit started an attack and ran into a German trap. Many Americans were killed, about 120 wounded and at least 210 missing. The company, on a hill east of famed Hill 609, was ordered to attack a hill to the southeast, and was moving toward a wheatfield when trapped.



JOHNNY BURKE

"We started an enveloping movement. Most of the unit attacked toward the north. Pocketed, they were never heard of again. One of our sergeants saw the commander of our unit walking back with other prisoners.

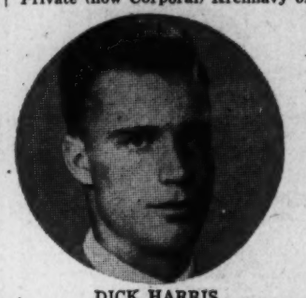
"We put in an attack which drew the enemy fire from all around us. There was no cover but the wheat. We tried to send men to attack the enemy's mortar and machine gun positions. They went up by two's and three's, one after the other. None came back. We tried sending them out singly, and one by one they were killed.

"Harris' company remained alone. They stayed all day, under attack. Finally Harris was able to get his men away at night.

"They fought with knives and brass knuckles.

The Germans attacked three times in all. Some of the Germans said they had fought in Russia and had arrived at the front only two days before.

"Harris' men would not have gotten away if it had not been for Private (now Corporal) Krchnavy of Breckenbridge, Pa. At the risk of his life he rigged a telephone line from the artillery to Harris' position and Harris was able to direct the fire of the guns in his support. Harris' men have told how he handled them and stood his ground in that hell."



DICK HARRIS

Georgetown has received no details of the death of Johnny Burke, beyond the simple notice that he was "killed in action in Africa." Maybe it was simply valiant, not spectacular. At Georgetown the only thing sensational about Burke was his golf, his great good friend, Jack Donahue of the Hoyas, relates.

"Johnny would win a big golf tournament and not bother to read the writeups about himself," says Donahue. "He never kept a scrapbook, or cared about the headlines. He was a great golfer almost despite himself. He rarely practiced. He just went out and shot scores that were good enough to win him the intercollegiate tournament in 1938, and the medal in the 1940 tournament.

"I've often wondered how great a golfer Burke could have been if he had taken the game more seriously. He was among the top eight in the National Amateur twice, and shot a 68 at Omaha, losing the medal by one stroke. If he had taken the time to practice, Johnny could not have been stopped in amateur ranks.

There comes news, too, of another Georgetown athlete in the service. He is big George Perpich, the 220-pound tackle who last January enlisted in the Marines and was sent to Parris Island, S. C.

The Marines like former football players, and Perpich was assigned to a machine gun unit. As one of a three-man machine gun crew, his job was to set up his gun, silence the enemy guns theoretically in the simulated warfare at Parris Island, dismantle the gun, and advance with it.

But it seems that Perpich carried his tactics of the football field too far. Well enough, his unit silenced the enemy guns. Then the job was to dismantle the 120-pound gun in three parts, with each member of the crew carrying 40 pounds of gun on a 300-yard advance. After cleaning out the "enemy," big Perpich didn't bother to dismantle the gun before advancing.

He simply picked up the 120-pound package, tucked it under his arm, and raced the 300 yards to his next position far in advance of the rest of the battalion. "It was great stuff," said Perpich's commanding officer. "Never have I seen a machine gun advanced with such speed. There was only one rub. I had to rebuke Perpich for making too much speed."

Bluege Puts O.K. on Nats' New Line-up

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, May 17.—The Nats ran into a postponement here today, and after learning the game would be moved up to a doubleheader on Wednesday, Manager Ossie Bluege took cognizance of a club which has won four of six games in the West, although the regulars are batting a cool .214 and only two of six starting hurlers have gone the route.

Bluege was given to overlook the stick marks, however, as Sunday's revised batting order produced 17 runs and 21 hits against the Tigers in accounting for a double victory and the Nats' pilot is going to stick with the new line-up, for a while at least.

George Case has come to life in the Nats' first Western invasion with 9 hits in 29 times at bat for a .310 average, best on the club and from Case the figures shrink to the puny .120 road marks of Stan Spence and Ellis Clary. Spence still holds to his runs-batted-in lead, however, adding two in the nightcap against the Tigers.

A bright spot in the pitching picture was the work of Milo Candini, the Yankee castoff, who informed Bluege last week that his ailing arm had mended, and then proved it with a relief turn against the Tigers in which he allowed only two singles in 3 2-3 innings and won his second game.

Candini's performance has earned him a temporary starting place on the Nats' staff as Bluege announced today that the big fellow would start Friday night in the opener of the White Sox series.

Ewald Pyle will face the Browns tomorrow, Dutch Leonard and Jim Mertz in the twin bill on Wednesday and Early Wynn Thursday.

The Nats' hurlers, who stopped Pinky Higgins cold Sunday in holding him hitless, snapping a 16-game hitting streak and knocking the Tiger third sacker from the top of the league's leading hitters, may not meet up with his successor, Vernon Stephens, the Browns' power hitter who carries the St. Louis pennant hopes, until the Army grabs him.

Local Boxer Badly Beaten By Ex-Champ

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Jackie Wilson, twice former N. B. A. featherweight champion from Pittsburgh, threw the book of boxing at Washington's young Danny Petro last night at Griffith Stadium, slashing and sharpshooting his way to a technical knockout victory in 1:12 of the tenth round with almost ridiculous ease.

A crowd of 4447 which paid $6236 sat in on Promoter Joe Turner's first outdoor show of the year and waited all night for the famed "Walloping Wop's knockout punch that never came. It was just a case of what usually happens when a youngster of 14 professional fights goes against a veteran of Wilson's caliber—an ability that carried him to the top of the heap.

Brought to Knees

It was the first time in Danny's young fight life that he ever was a kayo victim—technical or otherwise. And it was, in the final analysis, that right of Wilson's which finally brought Danny to his knees and forced Referee Charley Reynolds to mercifully stop the proceedings.

It may have been that Danny fought Wilson all wrong. Or it might have been Wilson was cute enough to make Petro fight the way Danny didn't want to. At any rate, the rushing, tearing, punch-throwing Petro wasn't in the ring last night. It was a Petro that elected to box with one of the greatest—and he paid the full penalty.

For one brief moment in the second round, Danny hurt Wilson and, with a little more experience and ring savvy, may have finished it then and there. But Wilson danced away, shook off the ill effects of Danny's hard left hook to the body, and came back strong. In the first two rounds, Danny's punches gained him the edge, but from there on, it was all Wilson.

Had Danny Dizzy

From the very first round, Wilson had Danny's nose bleeding. It bled continuously all the rest of the way. In the third and fourth, he had Danny Dizzy, but Petro, answering his critics as to his ability to take it, gamely stuck it out. Not until the ninth, after a terrific right hand bombardment, did Danny go down. And then it was the bell that saved him.

In the tenth and final round, Jackie put Danny down once more for nine, staggered him twice again, and then shot terrific rights to the body and chin that made Danny sink to the canvas. Then it was Reynolds stopped it, despite the protests of Danny.

As a fight, it was only that for two rounds. Then it was a master giving a pupil a boxing lesson, only with vicious intent. Danny weighed 123½, Wilson, 128.

Brother Charley Petro, 149, upheld the prestige of the Petro family by scoring a technical kayo over Soldier Joe Sole, 145, Richmond, in 2:59 of the fifth round of the eight round semifinal. Charley had Sole down four times before Referee Reynolds stopped it.

Two Quick Kayoes

A pair of early knockouts featured the preliminaries.

Eddie Kane, 144, former D. C. boxer now stationed in Baltimore with the Coast Guard, easily disposed of Buddy Sloan, 138, Washington, in 2:49 of the first round in what was an intended four-rounder. A hard right to the side of the head finished it.

Sammy Daniels, 139, Baltimore Negro, surprised by hanging a three-round knockout on Billy Bates, 130½, Pittsburgh, stablemate of Jackie Wilson. A terrific left hand to the chin stretched Bates out cold in 1:49 of the third round.

Tiger Nelson, 143, D. C. Negro, and Jimmy McGriff, 138½, also D. C., put on a hot six-rounder as the card opener, which ended in a draw.

Tech Defeats Coolidge, 6-2; Nears Leaders

The stage was set yesterday for the Tech-Eastern game on Friday when the Trainers pulled within a half-game of the interhigh-leading Ramblers by virtue of their 6-2 triumph over last-place Coolidge. Eastern now leads with four wins and Tech has a like number of victories but a setback.

This afternoon a double-header is booked for the series with one and possibly two teams destined to drop from the title picture. Wilson's fourth-place club will journey to Central to engage the Vikings in the day's feature. The Tigers, after dropping two straight tilts, have fought back into the championship fight with impressive victories over Tech and Coolidge.

In the other half of today's twin bill, Roosevelt will invade Eastern. Leigh Joy is slated to go to the hill for the Riders in an attempt to halt the Ramblers' winning streak. Going for Eastern will be either Dave Leonarduzzi or Clint Speiser.

Cocoa Kid Stops Al Gilbert of D. C.

Providence, May 17 (AP).—Cocoa Kid, New Haven welterweight, needed just less than two rounds to knock out Al Gilbert of Washington, D. C., in a scheduled 10-round bout here tonight.

Gilbert was declared a technical k.-o. victim after hitting the deck four times in the second round.

How to Purchase Tickets To Post's War Bond Game

Here is the formula for obtaining tickets to The Post's War Bond Game between the crack Norfolk Naval Training Station team and the Nats at Griffith Stadium on the night of May 24.

1—Buy a war bond at any of the District of Columbia banks or their branches.

2—Ask for a ticket to the War Bond Game along with your purchase.

3—Take your exchange ticket to the boxoffice at Griffith Stadium on any day between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. and receive a seat to the game.

Tickets will be issued for all value bonds from $25 to $1000. One ticket will be given for each bond purchased, with a limit set at four.

Dodgers Take Opener, 1-0, From Cards

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, May 17.—The Brooklyn Dodgers mastered the world champion St. Louis Cardinals today, 1 to 0, on the five-hit hurling of Frank (Rube) Melton as the two rivals for the National League pennant clashed in a twilight encounter before 12,723 fans.

The only run of the game came in the second inning and Melton himself got credit for knocking it home, effectively stopping the Redbirds on the threshhold of their four-game invasion of Ebbets Field and dropping them to third place in the standings behind the idle Boston Braves.

Dixie Walker drove in the wedge for Brooklyn's run by opening the second with a ringing double to the scoreboard, the only extra base hit of the ball game. After he moved to third on an infield out, Alex Kampouris walked. Then Melton smacked a perfect double-play ball at Third Baseman Jimmy Brown, who nailed Kampouris at second, but the chunky Dodger threw a block on Rookie Lou Klein that prevented him from completing the double killing.

130 WAACS to See Bond Game as Guests of Mrs. Lust

One hundred and thirty WAACS stationed in the Washington area will see the War Bond baseball game between the Nats and the Norfolk Naval Training Station team as the guests of Mrs. Sidney Lust on Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

MRS. LUST

Mrs. Lust, wife of Sidney Lust, Washington theater operator and civic leader, yesterday forwarded her check for $5000 to The Post.

"With this war bond purchase it is my hope that a section of seats can be provided for members of the WAACS," said Mrs. Lust. "I note that seats are being provided for sailors, soldiers and Navy WAVES and nurses, and I would consider it an honor to provide some tickets for the WACCS."

The Washington Post, sponsoring the game as a stimulation to war bond purchases, was advised yesterday that the brisk sale of seats had continued throughout the day at the 60 Washington banks which are the distribution points for tickets.

Admission to the game is by war bond only.

Tickets to the game are available to all purchasers who obtain their bonds at any bank in Washington. Buyers of bonds of all value from $25 to $1000 are entitled to reserved seats in the stadium.

Still available to bond purchasers are thousands of the choicest seats in the park, including more than 10,000 reserved grandstand seats which go hand in hand with bonds of the $50 value.

The presidential box at Griffith Stadium has brought a bid of $10,000 in war bonds to this point, with higher bids expected. To the highest bidder will go also the honor of throwing out the first ball to start the game.

The Post tomorrow expects to announce a glittering added attraction to the program, which will feature pregame ceremonies.

Norfolk's colorful Sailor team has won 27 of its 29 games thus far this season, including a victory over the Nats in early April. Its latest triumph was a 3-0 victory over the North Carolina Pre-Flight Navy team, for which Johnny Sain, former Boston Brave ace, pitched. On that club, too, was Johnny Pesky, former star shortstop of the Red Sox.

the Sailors will be presenting a line-up composed almost entirely of outstanding former big league stars now in the Navy.

Norfolk has a second base-shortstop combination comprised of Benny McCoy, formerly of the Athletics, and Phil Rizuto, former Yankee star. Two of the brightest stars among big league outfielders, Dom DiMaggio and Don Padgett, are playing the outfield for the Norfolk team.

Griffith Stadium box office windows will be open daily, including Sunday, to make exchanges of tickets received from the banks by bond buyers. Stadium ticket sellers will issue reserved seats to the game.

Palumbo Boots Home Attache in Charles Town Feature

Favorite Pays $3.60 To Backers

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 17.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo, "The Gem of the Ocean" for consistency over a period of years, put up one of his best saddle efforts to win the sixth race, best offering on the Monday card. The Italian-American veteran climbed aboard Attache, owned by S. W. Labrot, jr., and brought the 3-year-old son of Kantar and Honel home 2½ lengths in advance of Mrs. Dan Chamberlin's High Standard. Third money in the vest pocket field of five went to J. C. Mullineaux's Field of Gold.

The crowd had supreme confidence in the ability of both Palumbo and Attache. The combination was installed an odds-on favorite and the pay-off of $3.60 met with approval. Attache was clocked in 1:48 3-5 for the mile and a sixteenth. The track was fast for the first time since early last week.

Lalumbo had Attache away alertly but was forced to race on the outside of High Standard and War Bonnet during the opening quarter. Miindful that he was losing ground, Sammy eased up and took attache into the rail behind High Standard and War Bonnet.

At the far turn War Bonnet faded and High Standard swung out. Palumbo then drove through on the rail to take command, saved ground entering the stretch, and Attache easily stood off High Standard in the final drive. Field of Gold closed willingly to be third.

Jockey Leon Garrett, Nashville (Tenn.) boy, rode three winners on the card, turning in his final success aboard Hoptown Lass, a $58.20 shot, in the eighth race.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WORTHOWNING, $12.80, $6.00, $4.20; SOME GROUCHER, $17.60, $7.80; GENDARME, $5.80.

WORTHOWNING was allowed to settle into best stride, came out on backstretch, took command boldly and held on gamely. SOME GROUCHER, sluggish early, worked way to contention on outside and closed willingly to barely miss. GENDARME was carried out early and was forward factor thereafter. GROUCHY saved ground early, was shut off by SIR JEROME on backstretch and failed to rally.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $600. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:38. Off at 3:38½. Winner, S. W. Labrot, Jr.'s b. g. HAPPY HANNAH was closest to pace of NEVER HOME from start, rallied under pressure in stretch and wore down pacemaker in concluding strides. NEVER HOME, first away, set good pace and just failed to last. NEON LIGHT closed ground to show good effort. BUTTERMAN was well placed early and weakened.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:38. Off at 4:39. Winner, W. M. Beougher's br. m. (7) by Masked Marvel II—Blue Light. Trained by E. Beougher. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOPTOWN LASS, $58.20, $16.80, $5.80; ALSELEDA, $5.40, $3.40; JACK HORNER, $2.40.

HOPTOWN LASS was rated closest to pace of ALSELEDA, took command when asked and drew out in stretch run to win easily. ALSELEDA went to front at once, could not resist winner and held on gamely. JACK HORNER was carried wide early and failed to rally. SIR REG saved ground and had no excuses.

THE FAMILY JEWELS

THEY don't glitter. They weren't handed down by Great-Aunt Harriet who married rich. They're non-wearable, non-keepable, non-hockable.

But they're family jewels all the same.

And they're more than that.

They're token of the family's new meaning.

They tell you that the home is a home now – no longer a sort of semi-hotel, a stopping-off place for Sis between jaunts to house parties – for Junior between sorties with the gang – for Mother between sessions of the bridge club – for Dad between bowling nights.

They tell you what the family's like now. Pooling everything, sharing everything. Acting, thinking, buying, planning – no longer each for each, but all for all.

This isn't the first time. This is the family as it was once before, in the days of America's founding. This is the family as it is recorded in early American history – this is the family as it made that history.

It's a cycle completed. It's the return to power of the highest, strongest, healthiest force the world has yet seen – the integrated, united, work-together, fight-together, stay-together American family.

It took a tremendous national crisis to restore that tremendous national power. But make no mistake about it: once restored, that power will never again be shaken.

Here at LOOK Magazine, we know what that means. The family has been our province, our public and our special domain for years.

Not that we claim credit for the family's great current rebirth. That is the family's own magnificent doing.

But from the beginning, we have built a magazine for the family, the whole family, the family as a social and economic unit.

How well we have succeeded is plain: we have achieved an editorial pattern which the family seeks, trusts, turns to – the revitalized family of today. In our 6 years, we have achieved a circulation which today stands at more than 2,000,000.

We think it's good to be a part of something so very good for America.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

8000 New Employes In New OPA Budget

Office of Price Administratoin's 1944 budget, which will be sent to Congress this week, will call for approximately 8000 new employes of whom 6000 would be assigned to the local boards. The staff in the national office here, however, would be reduced somewhat. . . . Ed Gaumnitz has been appointed chief of the BEW's Office of Exports. . . . The Byrd Committee will release soon a blistering report on the misuse of Federal personnel. It'll go into some misleading statements on personnel that have been made by Federal agencies. . . . Paul R. Taylor is the new chief of WPB's natural gas division. . . . War Labor Board employes contributed $277 to the Government Girl fund. Incidentally, $40 was sent to the fund yesterday and other dollars are on their way.

Criticism of civil servants isn't confined to this country. Here's a story that's being told in England:

A doctor, an architect and a civil servant were arguing as to whose profession was the oldest.

The doctor claimed that a member of his profession must have been present at Adam's major operation. The architect topped that one when he pointed out that the world was created out of chaos and where there is a creation there must be an architect.

"But that's where I come in," cried the civil servant, "to cause chaos there must be a civil servant." The winner.

The plan of the Public Buildings Administration to require Federal agencies again to investigate the loyalty of their employes is itself being investigated and chances are excellent that it'll never happen. After the proposal was revealed here yesterday, three different Federal agencies are known to have eyed it with criticism. And each of these agencies can stop it cold. Among them was the Ramspeck Committee. PBA has actually ordered agencies occupying Federal buildings to investigate the loyalty of their employes. The Ramspeck Committee promises to give a thorough airing to the PBA suggestion that agencies hire private agencies to investigate at $3 per employe. The whole idea has a peculiar odor.

It's definite now that Federal employes will hold a service to honor their war dead on Memorial Day. It will take place Sunday, May 30, on the Monument Grounds. On the day following thousands of employes will pay another impressive tribute to their fallen colleagues—military and civilian—by working an hour longer at their jobs . . . It's no longer necessary to get a badge to enter the Civil Service Building. Abolition of the badge system will save about 50 employes . . . Joe E. Flynn is a firefighter at the new Camp Springs Airport which is being built by the Army Engineers. The fire department recently was transferred from a contractor's to the Federal payroll. But the personnel officer wouldn't accept Flynn because he had a 1-A classification. Flynn then tried to get a letter from the officer to his draft board saying he (Flynn) was available for induction. The officer refused. That isn't the way to make a fighting man out of Flynn.

The Smith Committee—you'll be hearing more about it—gets under way today with a blast at OPA's rent division. Landlords from nearby Virginia will testify. The committee will bring out that OPA Administrator Brown appointed the so-called Deacon Committee to recommend changes in the rent division. The Deacon Committee has and is ready to report, but it hasn't found anyone to accept its findings. The Deacon group, it's said, proposed changes along the lines suggested by real estate bodies which have been rejected by Brown. OPA is likely to be criticized by other Government officials for its rule providing for a third down payment on the cost of a home. The rule, it's said, has slowed the sale of Government-owned properties.

The manpower "freeze" order for the District in no way stops transfers of employes between Federal Agencies . . . Federal officials now feel that the Government population here will stay at a standstill until July 1 and then it'll start going up again. Thousands of vacancies are piling up, and many agencies haven't the money to hire replacements . . . War Manpower has discovered several artists among its employes. The drawings will be exhibited throughout next week at 1778 Pennsylvania Avenue . . . Federal agencies are desperately in need of stenographers, and the Civil Service has a number of eligibles on its register. The catch is they're Jap-Americans. Under the law agencies can't discriminate between races, but no agency will hire the Jap-Americans.

A Fig to You, Sir!

Here's something to go into a corner and meditate over:

In 1938, 335 cases of threats were filed in Municipal Court; in 1939, 344; in 1940, 351; in 1941, 350; but in 1942, with a population increase of nearly a million, there were only 254.

New Hotel Rules

Chicago.—Because of a maid shortage, thousands of permanent guests at more than 150 Chicago hotels have newly assigned weekly tasks.

The management of the hotels advised them they would have to make their own beds—but on Sundays only. Hotel managers said there was little complaint by the guests.

District Committee Meets Today to Study Plan to Relieve Employers

Legislation to amend the District Unemployment Compensation Act and reduce employers' contributions to the reserve fund was reported favorably by a subcommittee of the Senate District Committee yesterday.

The full District Committee will consider the report, along with other items on its calendar, at an executive session called at 2 p. m. today by Chairman McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada.

The bill, favorably reported by Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota acting as a subcommittee of one, was passed by the House in March. It introduces a sliding scale of employer payments from a maximum of 2.7 per cent of the payroll, which all employers now pay, down to one-tenth of 1 per cent, the rate being determined on the labor turnover in each establishment.

Increased benefits to unemployed are included. The bill increases the present maximum of $18 for 19 weeks, to $20 for 20 weeks and enlarges the dependency clause to include a spouse and any child, regardless of age, dependent upon an unemployed person receiving benefits.

Members of the armed forces inducted after March 31, 1940, would have their benefit rights preserved from date of induction.

Bushfield's report commented on the fact that 34 States use the sliding scale in computing employers' payments, and pointed out the present surplus of $36,605,258 in the District reserve fund.

"There is enough in this reserve fund," Bushfield said, "at the present time to carry the District 15 years at the present rate of payments without taking anything from employers."

Bushfield said labor objections were "not well founded."

Houston Man Indicted on Bigamy Count

In an indictment returned yesterday by District grand jury against David W. Jalloway of Houston, Tex., charging bigamy, it is alleged Jalloway married his second wife, Mary R. Pumphrey of 1214 B Street Southeast twice while still married to a Houston woman.

His second wife charged that Jalloway married her in Waldorf, Md., in 1932—that she divorced him in Washington in 1941 and remarried him here in 1942, and then discovered he had a legal wife in Texas all the time. She also claims Jalloway married her as William Green and that he married the Texas woman as David Jalloway.

Three-card monte—the old slick game—came to life yesterday when two men, Clarence Scott and James X. Adams, both Negroes, were indicted on the charge of taking $41 from George N. Hart, Negro, 1143 Fifth Street Northwest, after getting him to play the three-card game.

Other indictments handed up to Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court yesterday were:

Grand larceny and larceny after trust—Henry G. Jenkins. Grand larceny—John M. Bell, Johnnie J. Casley, James G. Goldring. Receiving stolen property—Jennie B. Nelson. Robbery—William F. Alexander, James Perry, Lawrence Gill, John E. Jones. Housebreaking—Conrad F. Carter. Housebreaking and larceny—Jesse B. Ballard, Wesley E. Andrews, John Tillman, jr., Israel P. Dudley, Frankling Nickens.

Construction Unit Of WPB Slated To Return Here

The entire construction division of the War Production Board, whose 500 employes occupy three stories of the Empire State Building in New York, is to be transferred to Washington effective June 30, informed officials stated yesterday.

WPB sources said previous proposals to "decentralize" the division—tantamount to eliminating it—have been dropped.

Instead the division will be brought to Washington and made part of the staff of the new facilities review committee of WPB, soon to be set up. This group will administer the recently announced cutback of munitions plant projects and pass on future proposals for plant construction and machine installations.

First-Aid Course

A new Red Cross first-aid course will start today at the All Souls' Unitarian Church, Sixteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest, and will meet Tuesday and Friday evening from 8 to 10 p. m. Mrs. K. Hilding Beij will be the instructor.

Scholarship Award

Eleanor G. Kingman, a senior at Woodrow Wilson High School, has been awarded a scholarship in home economics at the Drexel Institute of Technology. She won it in a competitive examination for students in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland and the District.

U. S. Neglectful as Landlord, Tenants of Old Houses Report

Hundreds of Washington citizens who now pay their rent to the United States Government would just as soon, if not sooner, deal directly with private landlords.

"You never know just where you stand as a tenant with the Government," is the common complaint. And much more serious is the charge that Uncle Sam has been flagrantly neglecting his responsibilities to the people who live in his houses.

Some 60 occupied homes in the District are owned and controlled by the Government. Acquired as the result of congressional authorizations to buy up properties in designated areas for Federal buildings, the Government in many instances found itself in possession of the properties but without funds or authorization to do the building.

Many hundreds of structures were torn down in anticipation of the construction work, with thousands of people left homeless. But dozens more buildings were permitted to stand since to demolish them simply "with a view to building later would have aggravated the housing shortage," as one United States official put it.

The result has been that the Government for years has been playing landlord, and will continue in the role until funds and congressional authorizations enable it to erect the Federal buildings planned.

The Post examined several blocks of Government-owned houses in the Southwest area of Washington yesterday, and found that about half are in an advanced state of disrepair.

Tenants in the 100 block C and D Streets Southwest declared that no repairs ever are made on the inside of the houses. Roof leaks and plumbing irregularities are attended to with more or less promptness, but one tenant said that her house had been neither papered nor painted in 10 years.

The majority of Government-controlled houses in this area have outside privies, many are without running water. And not one of those visited had electricity.

The occupants of 311 First Street Southwest welcomed inspection of their home. The four-room structure boasts one small sink in the kitchen, which is the only source of water in the house. The water supply is uncertain because of ancient and congested plumbing.

"Just look out there," the woman said, pointing to her tiny yard. A pool of stagnant water glittered odorously where the water pipes had broken.

"I've called Federal Works over and over again since I moved in here two years ago, but nothing's done about it." A plumber calls periodically, it seems, but as often gives the house up as a bad job.

Out in the yard, a clogged privy endangers the family and the surrounding neighbors.

For this house—without heating or cooking equipment, or lights, the tenants pay their Government $18.50 a month, plus about $13 a year to the District for water.

Jam Session Real Adventure For Those Yet Uninitiated

By Ray C. B. Brown

Pvt. Bill Gottlieb, U. S. A., our staff specialist in swing, should have been occupying my seat in Uline Arena last evening, when a "Concert in Jazz" enlisted the services of Bobby Hackett, Pee Wee Russell, Eddie Condon, Bobby Haggert and other imported New Yorkers in friendly rivalry with a group of local experts including Marty Emerson, Charlie Frankhauser, Eddie Finkel, Mort Oliver, Lee Hardesty and Ralph Hawkins. His report would have differentiated the finer points of the performance, and set forth its merits or demerits with an authority to which I lay no claim. It is well for a novice in these matters to avoid the misuse of technical terms and to refrain from judgment upon things with which he is not acquainted.

BROWN

For one whose training in music was classical in the days when jam was exclusively preserved fruits and rug-cutting was confined to carpet-layers, last evening's experience was a venture into a strange land where the Three B's are not Bach, Beethoven and Brahms but Boogie-Woogie, Barrel-House and Blues. Echoes from that land have, of course, reached me by way of the radio, but that does not constitute an education, nor does it entitle me to handle the terminology of swing—a subject that has not yet been discussed by Stuart Chase and other professors of semantics.

That whimsical mathematician Charles Dodgson, alias Lewis Carroll, might have been prophetically in the groove in 1871 when he wrote his famous "Jabberwocky." The first verse, you remember, runs like this:

"Twas brillig, and the slithy toves
Did gyre and gimble in the wabe;
All mimsy were the borogoves
And the mome raths outgrabe."

You may also recall Humpty Dumpty's explanation of the last word: "Outgrabe is something between bellowing and whistling, with a kind of sneeze in the middle." But the prophetic element in the poem lies in the air of improvisation and the invention of words that seem to have meaning and incite the imagination to discover it. To me, the sound of swing has exactly this elusive and tantalizing quality in the treatment of tunes.

Up to the time when an approaching deadline called me away, the concert seemed to me rather academic, as though the musicians had not yet warmed up for a real jam session. There was plenty of good contrapuntal playing and inventive variation, but the fervor had not yet reached the boiling point. Perhaps it was the size of the auditorium that prevented a more companionable spirit, for the best jam sessions, they tell me are comparable to chamber music. Certainly, the echos in the place interfered sadly with one's comprehension of the niceties of the clarinet playing, and the trumpeters had the best of it in virtuosity.

Midway Hall Opens Today

Formal opening of Midway Hall, first of the Langston residence halls to be opened for Negro Government girls, will be held from 7 to 9 p. m. today.

central composition for the National Capital fully 5 miles in length, which will be unexcelled by that of any other capital city in the world. The buildings along East Capitol Street would be in marble or granite, similar to the Folger Shakesperian Library and the proposed Army Medical Museum, and Library Building.

2. A national stadium at the end of East Capitol Street. Caemmerer told the committee that the stadium was planned so Olympic games could be held here.

3. The National Arboretum. About 500 acres acquired, but will need an administration building and greenhouses before official openings. It will be a center for plant life in Northeast Washington as the National Zoological Park is for animal life in the Northwest.

Encircling Parkway

4. Development of the Fort Drive—a parkway to encircle the National Capital; much of the land needed has been acquired by the Government.

5. New site for the National Training School for Boys, which is now in Northeast Washington.

7. Wahington-Baltimore Boulevard, a six-lane drive, as a part of an Atlantic Coast highway from New York to Florida.

8. The South Capitol Street Bridge.

9. New Fourteenth Street Bridge.

10. Completion of the waterfront development along Washington Channel.

11. Completion of development in East Potomac Park.

Completion of Rectangle

12. Completion of the Northwest rectangle, (a) War Department Building, from Twenty-third Street; (b) Navy Department Building, west of Twenty-third Street to the Potomac River; (c) Pharmaceutical Institute Laboratory Building; (d) addition to the National Academy of Sciences; (e) Federal Reserve Building Annex; (f) addition to the Public Health Service Building; (g) Pan-American Annex, and (h) Heating Plant, Twenty-ninth and K Streets Northwest.

13. Development of Pennsylvania Avenue west of the White House.

For State Department

14. State Department Building on the west side of Lafayette Square.

15. Extension of the Treasury Department Building from Pennsylvania Avenue northward to H Street.

16. Historical museum in east wing of the White House, as proposed by the President.

17. Construction of a national auditorium in accordance with HR 1245.

18. Dupont Circle underpass.

19. Subway for use of taxicabs under main floor of Union Station.

20. Completion of Public Library at Pennsylvania Avenue and John Marshall Place.

40. Statue of Sir William Blackstone.

41. Memorial for the Twenty-ninth Division, American Expeditionary Forces.

Latest USO Club Here Dedicated

Speakers Hail Salvation Army As Largest Unit Begins Operation

A depth of spirit is important to the fighting man, Senator Harold H. Burton (Republican) of Ohio, said last night in dedicating Washington's largest USO, opened by the Salvation Army at Eighth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest. He said that USO clubs are important in the building of this spirit.

Contending that all servicemen owed a debt to the Salvation Army he said he came last night to pay part of his debt incurred as a serviceman during the last war.

Also speaking before the club, which will provide lodging for 125 men and numerous game and recreation rooms was Col. John D. Langston, chairman of Selective Service Planning Council, whose daughter is an officer in the Army. Colonel Langston said that his chief, Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, head of the Selective Service, had fond personal memories of the Army lassies during World War I who were never too near the front or too tired to produce a doughnut and coffee. "I have never heard the Salvation Army talk to a man about his spiritual welfare when his stomach was empty," said Colonel Langston.

Granville Gude, president of the Washington Board of Trade offered felicitations also, and others participating in the ceremonies included Brig. Charles H. Dodd, of the Salvation Army; Commander of the American Legion; Mrs. Major Lisle Shackelford and Col. Edmund Hoffman of the Salvation Army.

George A. Myers offered vocal selections. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox presided. Dr. John Rustin gave the invocation, and benediction was pronounced by Chaplain Stanton W. Salisbury.

Boy of 10 Drowns In Lake Kingman

Joshua Barber, 10, of 634 N Street Northwest, drowned yesterday at about 4 p. m. when he slipped and fell into Lake Kingman while crossing the Benning Road Bridge. A playmate, Bernard Barnes, 9, 629 N Street Northwest, looked on helplessly.

The boy, identified by his uncle, Jack Barber, 634 Florida Avenue Northwest, was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital after being taken from the water by harbor precinct police.

Printers' Election

The candidates are as follows: For president, J. I. Crockett, Raymond Downs, Jesse B. Manbeck and Lewis H. Smith; for vice president, John R. Evans, Frank S. Lerch, Guy Caponnetto and Francis J. Schwoerer; for secretary-treasurer, Hayward T. Hux, William L. Larkin, Joseph Z. Lins and George Lee Rooney.

Cash, Gems Stolen From Store's Safe

A total of $535 in cash, over $100 in checks, and an unknown amount of jewelry was stolen from a clothing and jewelry store at 3038 Georgia Avenue Northwest, police said William Tenn, proprietor, reported yesterday. Entrance was made by removing a wooden panel from a rear door. Police said the valuables were taken from an unlocked safe.

Shima Divorce Filed

Jesse A. Shima, described as a "subject of the Empire of Japan" and several years ago the recipient of $67,000 of a $200,000 bequest left him by the late Mrs. Mary F. Henderson, Washington socialite, was sued yesterday in District Court for absolute divorce by Mrs. Sobretta Brown Shima, Negro, 1200 Linden Street Northeast.

Shima lives at 1300 Park Road Northwest. The suit describes him as being in "constructive custody" of the United States Government with permission to reside in Washington. The suit charges the couple separated in 1938.

Faces Assault Charge

Pvt. William J. Weston, jr., 37, Negro, of the Ninth Precinct, reported he was forced to use his service baton yesterday to subdue a traffic violator who resisted arrest so violently that both men were treated at Casualty Hospital, where Weston was admitted for contusions.

Weston observed John Branch, Negro, 727 Morton Street Northeast, drive his auto past a signal, he said. When Weston attempted to arrest him Branch struck him in the eye, the police report said. Branch is being held at station house, charged with disobeying the signal and assaulting an officer.

Federation Concert

The District Federation of Music Clubs will meet tomorrow at 7:30 p. m. in the Arts Club. This will be followed at 8:45 p. m. by a concert open to the public. The program includes works by two resident composers: a sonata for flute and piano nad a piano suite, "City Streets," by Dorothy Radde Emery, and a chorus, "The Old Boat Zion," by R. Deane Shure.

Lilian Harmon Burke, pianist, will play Dohnanyi's Rhapsody in F sharp minor. Anne Yago McGuffey, contralto, will sing lyrics by Stefano Donaudy, Frank Bridge, Danile Wolfe and Mrs. Emery, and the Lovette Choral Club will be heard in two groups of songs.

Oratory Course

A ten-week course in public speaking will start today at 8 p. m. at Friendship House, 619 D Street Southeast, under the direction of Donald Thomas, a member of the speakers' bureau of the American Red Cross. A fee of $1 for members and $2 for nonmembers will cover the cost of the entire course.

Victory Sidelights

233 'S' Gas Coupons Put Man in Cell

Justice Matthew F. McGuire yesterday in District Court, sentenced Sydney Cohen, 26, 204 F Street Northwest, to six months in jail after he was found guilty of illegal possession of 233 "S" gasoline ration coupons.

Cohen is due to be arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage this morning on similar charges. The Government prosecution was in charge of Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius.

To Present Painting

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, and Brig. Gen. L. B. McAfee will be principal speakers at a luncheon at Wardman Park Hotel at noon today. The painting, "Life for the Wounded," by Jes Schlaikjer, noted American artist, will be presented to the Army Medical Corps.

The painting, which depicts administration of blood plasma under fire will be presented to General McAfee, representing the Army Surgeon General, by Dr. John Reichel, president of Reichel Laboratories, Inc., Kimberton, Pa. Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, chairman of the Gray Ladies here, and sister of General MacArthur, will unveil the painting.

Basic Ceilings Urged

Price ceilings on luxuries are nonessential, in the opinion of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, who said yesterday at her press conference she thought all necessary and basic items should be under ceilings, but that "it doesn't matter whether they are on anything else."

Price Administrator Prentiss Brown last week removed ceilings from 10 "novelties" and has indicated prices of some other items will be permitted to go up as the cost of basic foods are kept in line or rolled back.

Coordination Of Migrants' Aid Planned

Social and Welfare Leaders Map Data For Institute to Assist Newcomers

In the first step toward coordination of the Washington agencies which assist the young worker, both before and during his service to the Government, representatives of local social and welfare groups met yesterday in the Y. W. C. A. to assemble information for a forthcoming institute on War and Postwar Problems of Young Migration.

The list of agencies ready to help the young migrants and the services they have to offer, which were described at the forum yesterday, will eventually be compiled in a handbook for the incoming war-workers. The proposed text will be developed at the institute, to be held here May 26 and 27.

First Lady Presides

Presiding at the preliminary conference yesterday was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, often identified with youth causes, who commented that such a directory would provide "quick information" which the Washington newcomer, generally confused and unsophisticated, needs for guidance during his first encounters with unfamiliar surroundings.

Suggesting that the forthcoming handbooks should be available in every office of every Government agency, Mrs. Roosevelt noted, "There are many services now available to fill the needs of young people, but where the hitch lies is in their lack of knowledge of what is available. These new youngsters don't find out about them until they have been here for some time and have struggled through loneliness, poor housing facilities, lack of recreation and financial hardships. During that time many serious things may happen. They must have the needed information before they come to Washington, or at least upon arrival."

She added that although preparation for their work is offered, "we aren't giving them proper preparation for living. They are coming into a different atmosphere and they don't know how to cope with it." Mrs. Roosevelt suggested more publicity in small city and country papers to help orient the many Washington-bound workers, and as a further solution proposed that each Government office should have available people with whom the young migrants may confer.

The problems of the incoming workers were yesterday outlined as follows:

1. Premigration problems (decision about coming, preparation).
2. Problems on the journey and upon arrival (mishaps, temporary housing).
3. Getting settled in work (placement including classification, counseling and supervision).
4. Getting settled in living arrangements (housing, food, local transportation).
5. Achieving successful living (health, recreation, social life, church relationships).

Present Agencies

Agencies in Washington which assist the young worker in one or several of these problems include:

U. S. Office of Education, Coast Guard Women's Reserve, D. C. Recreation Department, Coordinating Council of Home Hospitality, Office of Education, Finance Division of the War Department, War Manpower Commission, USO, Office of Community War Services, American Legion, National Education Association, American Vocational Association, WAVES, CWL, American Association of Colleges, Salvation Army, Alliance for Guidance of Rural Youth, FSA Office of Education, Coordinating Council of Home Hospitality Committee, NYA, Journal of Home Economics, OCD, Extension Service of Department of Agriculture, Office of Community War Services, Selective Service, Guidance Department of District Schools, Employe Service Section of OPA, Hillcrest Children's Village, American Council of Education, Y. W. C. A., Council of Social Agencies, Community Activities Section of War Department, American Home Economics Association, Civil Service Commission and Federation of Churches.

New Uniforms Offered Women Air Wardens

Metropolitan Washington's 10,000 women air raid wardens will soon blossom forth in a new uniform—that is, they may if they choose.

Officially approved by District OCD in an order by Porter Lumbkin, assistant director, yesterday the uniforms are already available in several downtown stores.

The new gear, designated by the manufacturer as being "victory gray-blue" in color, for all the indecision, is very fetching. (And the color is powder clue.)

Purchase is optional.

Tailored along conventional military lines, the uniform is two-piece with cap designed along the order of those worn by WAACS and Marinettes. It is summer weight and priced moderately.

Wardens may also wear (1) the white oversea style cap or (2) a new victory gray-blue oversea style cap.

Merchants in Washington who expect to carry women warden uniforms in stock should first contact Air Raid Warden Service headquarters, 1341 Maryland Avenue, Sylvan King, assistant chief warden, said.

Memo to Miss Brown

SUBJECT:

Summer Is a-Cumin' In

Will Shakespeare might turn in his hallowed grave at our appropriation of his lyric line, but I'm sure he'd agree that it's timely, all recent rain and chill to the contrary. And now that it's May, it's time for us to give some thought to the sunshine which is bound to come along any day now.

Now that interest in indoor activities is waning, the District of Columbia Department of Recreation is right in step with a fine summer program. Tennis courts are even now being rolled and lined, between rain storms, and permits are being printed by the ream. A lot of people complain that they don't know quite how to go about finding a place to play tennis—but that's just because they haven't discovered the Department of Recreation. If you'll write to the department's office at 3149 Sixteenth Street Northwest, applying for a tennis permit, they'll send one off to you, but quick, and all free. They'll also inclose a list of public courts (and there's probably one in your own backyard.) After you've got the permit and the lay of the land, you need only to get out your best racquet and shoes and hike off to the nearest court. No reservations are necessary.

Badminton enthusiasts can also find the answer to their prayers at 3149 Sixteenth. Permits to use the public badminton courts (and they're fine ones) are available, free, upon written application. Or, if you've forgotten how to write, stop in at the office during the day and get the permit yourself.

The public swimming pool will be opening later on—with special hours for adults. The Department of Recreation makes up a schedule every year which they'll be glad to send you when it's ready—and this can be your guide to swimming time. They'll also be glad to tell you where the pools are located, which, of course, is also essential.

The department keeps up a number of softball diamonds which you've probably seen here and there about the city; however the demand for these is so great that the various leagues have them just about sewed up for the current season. It might be worth while, though, if you have a team all collected, to call the department's information service at ADams 2050 and ask them to help you get a game fixed up with the Rover Girls or some such. Perhaps you'd even like to join one of the leagues and get into big time stuff—and the D of R could give you some dope on that. Then, of course, there are always off hours and off days when they might squeeze you in between WPB Flashes and the War Department Devil Dogs. (Sounds like quite a crowd for one poor little diamond!)

Most exciting thought of all right now is of picnics. These require little or no exertion and include eating, which are two great things in their favor on sultry days. Rock Creek Park, et al, have most elegant picnic groves with stoves, wood and the works which can be arranged for in advance with practically no trouble involved.

Try to determine the approximate number of accomplices you'll have on the picnic (and, of course, make allowances for about 25 per cent failures-to-show-up-ers), then call or write the Department of Recreation, being sure to specify the date, time and approximate vicinity you have in mind. They can then assign a likely spot to you—and right size, right time, right day—and will let you know right quick where your station will be.

The stoves in most of the groves (this is getting euphoneous, isn't it?) are the stone type with a grill across the top. There's plenty of wood nearby, either chopped or in the form of underbrush. As for utensils, pots, pans and such, plan on some such individual enterprise as frankfurters or cubed steaks (9413 points) which each person can cook to his heart's content on forked sticks. Pretty elementary stuff, but then there's always someone who takes along eggs to scramble—and on a stick that's not easy.

So you don't have much excuse, Miss Brown, for missing out on the current fresh air and the sunshine that's surely coming

Next Fall

Your best "little black dress' of winter is back from the cleaners, and you hang it in its moth-resistant wrappings in the closet. "Well, I won't see you again until next fall," you think. You'll take it for everyday then, you decide—no wait! It might have to do service again for best, what with the income taxes, and the high prices, and the uncertainties of war. Oh well, surely something will happen that you can buy a smart new dress made on the latest WPB lines . . . Still you need a new coat . . . well anyway, it's no use to worry about that now. Next fall's a long time away. Everything may be very different.

You hang up your wool dresses, your winter suit, your long-skirted dinner gown (good heavens, when will you ever need that again?) all neatly encased for their summer retirement. They seem a part of another life. You feel a little sad bidding them goodby. Maybe you'll never wear some of them again . . . why maybe your entire life will be different . . . next fall.

You lay out your winter coat to take downtown for storage. How far away and nebulous seems the time when you will wear it again. Why the chill tang of late October or early November will be in the air . . . and people will be getting into dark clothes . . . and worrying about keeping warm through another winter . . . and . . . well perhaps a lot of things will have happened!

Next fall! What will the world be like when you put on your winter coat again, when you take down your warm dresses and pull them out of their paper bags? What will be going on here at home . . . across the Atlantic . . . the Pacific?

Will women at last have resigned themselves to sacrifice and shabbiness or still be fighting at the dress racks? Will meat platters be more barren, grocery prices higher, life more austere and primitive, or will ladies still be lunching and cocktailing? Will guns still be roaring across the oceans, bombs dropping, men falling on battlefields . . . the world full of killing? Or . . . or will there be a breaking of the clouds, a widening gleam of light?

Your head is dizzy with the thought of it. Five months ahead? Decades, even perhaps a century can elapse before that—in times like these. Even the smaller milestones of life, such as putting clothes away, now carry such disturbing implications.

Next fall! Where will you be? What will you be doing? Oh, probably right where you are now . . . putting away your summer things. Just the same as ever. No, no, not the same! Whatever happens, you will not be the same—you MUST not be the same. The world must not be the same. There has already been too much of the same . . . year after year . . . everybody refusing to budge . . . trying to keep things the same—even to turn them back . . . damming up the stream of life. And now the torrent, the flood!

You shut the closet door vigorously. No more of this nostalgic lament for a fall gone by. No more of this vague fear of a fall approaching. Next fall you will be five months older, five months wiser, five months changed. When you come back to your wool dresses, your winter coat, not only the world will be changed but you, also! New wine for old bottles. Better that than an ossified woman in a new coat.

Summer stretches ahead. The stream of life, now thundering and gushing over the rocks, will again seek its channel. You, too, will flow onward. You will not dam the stream.

The Case of Mrs. A.

Mrs. A has a 48-hour week at the office, a husband and an apartment. Her maid is working in a torpedo factory and the handyman is too busy with air-raid warden activities to be interrupted. She has a flare for a budget that's equal to her ingenuity with a chiffon scarf. A look at her shopping list reveals some of her secrets!

1. Get paper curtains for living room and kitchen. Jane told me that she bought a pair of those for her bedroom and no one would ever know they were paper! They're ready to hang, 54 inches wide and 2½ yards long. They look like real fabric because they're made from a new wood cellulose material that drapes very nicely. The damp weather we have helps them stay soft and pliable and only 89 cents a pair!

2. Four table mats. (These really cut down the size of my laundry and save good linens too. They're made of waterproof paper or cellophane in a variety of colors and designs. Just wipe them off and use them over and over again. 39 cents each for the cellophane.

3. Bright colored shelving for the kitchen. (I'd like something that doesn't have to be tacked down and with edges that won't curl up. The shelving I have in mind has a decorated edge that looks gay in my white kitchen. It isn't a dust catcher either. 5 cents for 9 feet.)

4. Find some paper guest towels. (These serve the purpose just as well and are really attractive. You get 36 in a box for 45 cents—reasonable. Colors are yellow, green, peach, white, or red.)

5. A substitute for steel shower curtain hooks. (I heard that there's a new kind of hook that's made of plastic and it threads through the curtain in such a manner that it won't come off. They're unbreakable and a set of 12 is 50 cents. These substitutes are to my liking!)

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Has No Patience With Lady Journalists' Habit, She Says, of Fondly Extolling 'Modest Homebody' Wives of Certain Men in Public Life

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I wish you would take time out, some day in the near future, to address your skill and wisdom to the problem of educating your sister newspaper columnists in a new set of values concerning wifehood. I used to think of newspaper women as being up to date, but evidently some of the craft are still living mentally in pioneer days, if not, indeed, in the wigwam era. I refer to those who write, feelingly, of the wife of some man in public life, that: "She is a homebody . . . she is a stay-at-home type . . . she is modest, self-effacing, and her sphere of interests revolves around her husband and children."

When I read of that dear little wife, whose only thought is of her husband and children, I wonder why he ever comes home at night. I know mine wouldn't. He would quickly search out some frilly little person in whose head there was some lively understanding of many of the outside world interests that he thinks about. He would find some one whose daily experiences and intellectual curiosity just naturally threw a new light on his favorite subjects. He would be bored stiff by a little woman whose major interest in life was to sew on his buttons and cook his bacon—important as these chores are, of course.

I am fed up with the silly, self-conscious, perennial and inconclusive debate which women are waging, as to whether homemaking or a career is most rewarding to wives. Surely the two are not exclusive of each other. Many fine women have prover this point. But let me say here that I don't consider that being a secretary means having a career. That's just a job. A career means giving significant expression to some outstanding talent which must have an outlet—which is a vastly different matter from "taking a job" to get away from the so-called drudgery of housework, only to find there is drudgery in office work, too.

English Wife Cited As 'Expert in Living'

Up to the time of my marriage, when I was 30 years old, I had been trained in this phoney school of thought. It was fostered at college. I was frankly scared stiff of marriage, because I had already developed some interests in my own right that to me were both fascinating and satisfying. I suppose the sentimentalists would have had me give them all up, so that my life could "revolve around husband and children"—when in point of fact, the dear man had married me because my range of interests was so intriguingly and instructively different from his. I think I finally landed him for three reasons: I could swim quite as far as he could. I liked to camp and live out of doors. And I was so wrapped up in public and community affairs that I always had enthusiasms galore to talk about. Glamour girls and would-be glamour girls, please take note: I am a very plain-looking woman. And he was quite a catch.

Then we went to live in England, and a dear little English wife put me straight. I had rather looked down on her at first, because, to my notion, she was not "educated." She was not a college graduate. She had married at 18, and quite deliberately she had four children, just as fast as nature and the doctor would permit. Almost at once, she engaged the most expert children's nurse she could find in London; and in spite of their bumper crop of babies, her husband always found her ready at night to preside, prettily dressed, at a well-planned dinner, and prepared to spend the evening with him uninterrupted—whether for reading or dancing or for cards.

With a feeling of lofty superiority, and yet fascinated by the ease with which she was producing and successfully managing her large family, I asked her: "But how can you bear to have a nurse in full charge of the children? You are missing so many of the little things your children are doing." This expert-in-living replied: "I am not trained to take care of so many children. My husband and I take care of them on Thursdays, and most Sundays belong to them. But that is about our limit. You see, my husband is young and gay. He likes to have me ready to share all his evenings; and to do the things he wants to do. And after all, these children will only be in our house for 18 years or so, and then they will be gone. But I am going to see that my husband is still here. Also, when the children are older, I want to be well and able to enjoy them. My husband and I want to be free then to help them with their 'growing' problems. That is much more important than giving them their bottles or changing their napkins now."

Versatile Mother Is Family Asset

Well, I thought, she has something there! Better a large family and a lasting marriage and the opportunity to develop one's own interests, than sentimental martyrdom to motherhood. Somewhat later, a doctor said to me: "Why do you worry so about being a good mother? Don't try so hard. After all, you spent many years in other types of work. Use your mother instinct to get adequate help in your home. Then take a day off every week and keep your hand in on that other work. You will come back home the better for it; and your husband and children will profit in the end. By keeping abreast of your special interests you will bring to your family something that other mothers do not have to give. Don't try to do it all. Do the things you can do best." Sensible counsel, I thought.

So I followed that doctor's advice. I kept up with my special interests on my days off. Sometimes I had a month to myself in summer. And sure enough, in almost no time (so it seemed to me), the children were gone, or at least on their way out. This winter they have all been gone and my husband along with them. And one of my sideline interests has turned into a profession, which is supplementing our army income sufficiently to help pay college expenses, in addition to keeping me from worrying myself sick about my husband's safety. He says my letters have just about kept him alive this winter. And when our daughter comes home from college she doesn't ask, "How's the grocer?" (though at the moment, this might be a most provocative question). Nor, "How did you get along with the washing last week?" Nor, "Is the housecleaning done yet?" On the contrary, she usually says: "Mom, tell me what you have been up to since I saw you last."

However, I presume your sisters of the press would have me rooted in the home—"modest, self-effacing, with my sphere of interests revolving around my husband and children." To which I say: God help husband and children if this had been my policy. You might explain the unfortunate fate of children when their mother is the type who never loosens "the silver cord." But please modernize the viewpoint of the ladies of the press on this subject. F. M. M.

Complaint Reveals Lack of Discernment

DEAR F. M. M.: Speaking from first-hand knowledge of the social views of the average woman journalist, I feel safe in saying positively that you do the sisterhood an injustice, in supposing the majority of its members are sentimental and partisan admirers of homebody wives of men in public life. When and if they write in the vein you mimic, to wit: "She is a stay-at-home type . . . she is modest and self-effacing and her sphere of interests revolves around her husband and children——," etc., they are simply pen-painting some Mrs. Bigwig's personality picture as they see it.

If the description sometimes seems effusively caressing, it may signify the reporter's would-be self-serving hope of endearing herself to the presumably influential lady under discussion; or, again, it may be the result of the woman reporter's labored efforts to lean over backward to avoid revealing her essential lack of sympathy with the insistently retiring homemaker character. Since most of us have unconsciously set ourselves up as our own ideal person—a truism first called to my attention by an astute correspondent last week—and since the majority of newspaper women are doubling as homemakers and careerists, it follows logically that they as a class would be much more attracted to and impressed by the successful wife-and-careerist woman than by the demurely complacent homebody. So accept my assurance that you have chosen the wrong whipping boy for dramatizing your anger against senseless veneration of family-enslaved wifehood.

English Wife Made Career of Home Life

It seems to me your inference is equally illogical in at least one other respect, too. You give us the story of the English wife to support your theory that woman-the-individualist, with a full repertory of social interests in her own right, is the smartest homemaker—in the sense of being the most successful over the long haul of marriage. In other words, you indicate that you construe her well-reasoned performance as proof that "homemaking and a career are not exclusive of each other." But isn't it as plain as the nose on your face that this "expert-in-living" was concentrating primarily on wifehood as her career,—subordinating even motherhood to her all-in-all relationship to her husband? And that her deliberate feat of producing four children in rapid succession early in the marriage, and thereafter conspicuously implying first preference for her husband's society and approval, was a wise woman's way of adroitly emphasizing the far-flung prospectus and indivisible common interests of their "thee-and-me" union?

However, if your sketchily assembled philosophy of home life has stood you in good stead, so that your marriage has happily endured through the years, and brought you a steadily deepening companionship of spirit with husband and children, I suppose it is rather unimportant that you can't think straight, when earnestly striving to grasp the essential significance of what you hear, see and read concerning other people's lives. M. H.

Playmates Exert Strong Influence on Child's Habits

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

One cannot ignore the enormous influence any group or playmates has upon child's bad habits.

"Oh, do you suck your thumb?" from a playmate would be more devastating to the morale of a thumb-sucker than any bitter medicine, any thumb-guard or the full assortment of the parents' most humiliating comments.

One mother who admits she has always ignored the thumb-sucking of her infant now wonders what to do about her big girl who is still thumb-sucking.

"She has sucked her thumb until she has a bump on her lower lip and a callous on her thumb. We are trying to break her of the habit and she does try but what disturbs me as a former teacher is that she will be ridiculed when she goes to school."

The probability is that she will discover long before she is old enough for school that this is a baby habit upon which children comment sarcastically. Because this will be a rather universal attitude she will make an even greater effort to quell her desire for her thumb in order to live up to their expectations that she won't suck her thumb.

The child who drops this habit after the second year, as most of them do, outgrows the temporary physical results of it. One boy whose upper lip stuck out as if bee-stung because of his sucking habit, shows no trace of it now.

What this child needs is more companionship to inspire more active play so that the indulgence in such a passive habit as thumb sucking will be reduced.

The marriage of Miss Ann Carrington to Aviation Cadet Herbert R. Broderick, U. S. A. A. F., took place Saturday at Minter Field, Calif. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Carrington, jr., of Chevy Chase, and Cadet Broderick is the son of Mrs. Herbert R. Broderick and the late Lieutenant Broderick, United States Navy, of Arlington, Va.

Their wedding was performed in the Chapel at Minter Field, near Bakersfield, where the bridegroom is taking a basic training course.

Colombian Journalist Visits Here

Writer, editor and diplomat is Roberto Garcia Pena, in this country from Bogota at the invitation of the Department of State and spending a week in Washington.

Senor Garcia Pena is editor of El Tiempo, of Bogota, one of the most influential newspapers in South America. He speaks with pride of the fact that his paper is "frankly and belligerently pro-democratic." El Tiempo has a wide circulation and maintains correspondents in all parts of the world. A London office was recently opened to represent this paper exclusively.

A brilliant journalist, with an outstanding record in his field, Senor Garcia Pena has had a long and successful career as a writer and editor. He was also in his country's diplomatic service for a period of six years and served as Secretary of the Colombia Embassy in Lima, Peru, and with the same rank in Santiago, Chile.

While in the United States Senor Garcia Pena will visit representative newspapers in several States. He is also especially interested in observing schools of journalism in our universities and the great libraries of the United States.

Argentine Envoy Entertains for Senora Ocampo

One of Argentina's outstanding women, Senora Victoria Ocampo, editor of the magazine Sur, who is in Washington for a few days before she sets out on a lecture tour, was guest of honor at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon, given by the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil.

A number of Senora Ocampo's Washington friends whom she met on their visits to her country, were among the guests, among them the former American Ambassador to Argentina and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

Senora Ocampo was invited by the Guggenheim Foundation to visit the United States. She is eager to inspect the war plants and factories and to take note of the revolutionary role being played by women in industry. She will talk with young people about their attitude on postwar planning and would like to learn the reaction of "the man in the street" on the development of a more complete understanding between the two Americas.

Hope Ridings Miller

Frequently compared to Washington is Hollywood . . . another "city of magnificent intentions"—and distances—with just enough ambition-ridden exhibitionists around to give the impression that they predominate over the solid citizenry (although actually they don't); and with screwball incidents so much part and parcel of the daily round that half of them aren't even recorded in the press. In fact, they're usually circulated over cocktails as rumors of no special import; garbled from then on out; and frequently find their way into print months later, with any similarity between original happening and the story based on it being by that time merely an accident.

The resemblance between the Nation's Capital and the film city struck me with renewed force a few days ago when my special Hollywood informant sent in a bulletin about Dan Totheroh, the California playwright, who has many friends in Washington. Totheroh, by the way, is a talented young man who goes quietly about his business, and has managed by force of his accomplishments alone to stand out in a Hollywood crowd that all too frequently depends on other resourceful gestures to attract attention.

'Teas' in 'Tea Town' Rarely That

Now in the East and stationed at an Army camp to write plays specifically for the armed services, Totheroh took off from Hollywood not long ago, leaving his forwarding address with only a few friends, who agreed not to divulge it except in case of emergency. So at present there's not much chance his many acquaintances around these parts will be able to get in touch with him until he decides to reveal his military hide-out.

All of this, of course, obviously has nothing to do with the comparison theme mentioned at the beginning of this column. But here it comes. It is tied up with Totheroh's experiences just before he left Hollywood—and with an illuminating event that might well have happened in wartime Washington where even the parties that are called "teas" are rarely that. In fact, although Our Town has been publicized far and wide as America's greatest tea-drinking city, those of us who have been around before and since the war can tell you that either a cup of tea or a glass of water is harder to get at an afternoon fete than an extra pound of sugar with a used-up ration book.

New Case of Confusion in Filmland

Anyway, here's Totheroh's story . . . which, I insist, might well have happened in Washington. Having acquired the English habit for afternoon tea during the months he spent in London, Totheroh, knowing he would be leaving Hollywood soon, asked four friends to join him for a farewell cup of tea at a Hollywood spotlight center with which he was unfamiliar. But no sooner had he given his order for the British beverage, for five, than the waiter gasped, batted his eyes in unmasked astonishment, and dropped his pencil.

"Tea, sir?" he asked, retrieving his pencil. "Did you say tea?"

"Yes, tea, if you please. Orange pekoe."

Noting the agitated state of the waiter, the steward hastened toward the table. "What can we do for you, Mr. Totheroh?"

"Why, I'd like some tea for myself and friends. Just tea."

"Tea? Did I understand you correctly, sir?"

The playwright repeated his order.

"I'm sorry, sir—so sorry. We have no tea."

By this time the manager had joined the flurried group. "You wish tea, I understand, Mr. Totheroh. Of course you shall have tea. But the order is a bit unusual, and we are not prepared to serve you here. Would you please go back through the lobby, take a first corridor to the main dining room which you pass through to the conservatory to your right and . . ."

"Are you game?" Totheroh asked his friends. They were. After threading the maze of corridors and aisles to the conservatory, they arrived to find only empty tables, and not a waiter in sight. It was more than half an hour before they got their tea, and the afternoon was gone by then. "After this," said the playwright, "we'll have it in my studio. I didn't realize they'd never heard of tea in outside-Hollywood."

Men in Uniform Chief Interest Now

Author of "Deep Valley," a novel recently acquired by a film company, and also of the screen adaptation of Stephen Vincent Benet's "The Devil and Daniel Webster," Totheroh made up his mind some time ago that, for the duration, he would turn his talent toward plays that would have a specific appeal for men in uniform. At the camp where he is now working, he is under Army regulations; but if he finds time to break away for a week-end in Washington, he may find it just as difficult as in Hollywood to get a cup of tea . . . in any popular spot at cocktail time.

ABOUT THE TOWN: Although traditional White House garden parties definitely are "out" for the duration, wives of many members of Congress had a chance to view the Executive Mansion's tulip and pansy beds at close range yesterday afternoon. The occasion was the informal reception at which Mrs. Roosevelt entertained, assisted by the Cabinet hostesses. Wives of all members of Congress whose names are in the A-M classification were invited. The others will be on hand for a similar party next week.

Meanwhile, wives of members of the Senate will be entertained at the White House tomorrow afternoon, the fete following the same plan and procedure—beginning with a round of hand-shaking; then the viewing of a motion picture show indoors; then a stroll in the White House garden, either before or after a strictly nonrationed teatime menu is served.

All this was revealed yesterday at the First Lady's weekly press conference which took place for the first time in the new executive wing of the White House.

Record Number of Weddings Hold Interest of Capitalites

The past weekend saw scores of weddings taking place in Washington and nearby cities.

Of interest to many Washingtonians was the marriage in New York on Saturday night of Miss Mildred Esterbrook McConnell to Lieut. John William Good 3d, U. S. N. R.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. McConnell of New York and The Plains, Va., and Lieutenant Good is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Good of Moline, Ill.

Officiating at the 8:30 service in St. Bartholomew's Church was the Rev. George Sargent.

The bride was attired in white satin, fashioned with full gored skirt and circular train. Her train-length tulle veil was held by a bandeau of orange blossoms and she carried a white prayer book and bouquet of orchids.

Miss Elizabeth Earll McConnell was her sister's maid of honor. She wore pale gray marquisette, with a headdress of the same material and carried a bouquet of yellow gladioli. Bridesmaids were Miss Caryll Esterbrook McConnell, the Misses Anne and Catherine Flaherty, Mrs. Louis Murdock, Mrs. Richard Hosford, jr., and Mrs. Joseph Woodle. Richard Hosford, jr., served as best man, and ushers included Robert Earll McConnell, jr., Richard Esterbrook McConnell, Edward C. Schoede, F. Conning Kenly, jr., Paul J. Chase, John Farley and Samuel Spencer. A reception followed at Sherry's.

Buenzli—Dunworth

Making their home in Asheville, S. C., are Maj. and Mrs. Howard Malcolm Buenzli, whose marriage took place here on Saturday morning.

The bride is the former Miss Margaret Mary Dunworth, daughter of Mrs. Timothy William Dunworth and the late Mr. Dunworth. Major Buenzli is the son of Mrs. August J. Buenzli and the late Mr. Buenzli of Madison, Wis.

Their marriage took place at 10 o'clock in the Church of the Nativity, with the Rev. Lawrence McGlone officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a gown of white satin made along princess lines. Her veil of illusion was held by a coronet of seed pearls and she carried a shower bouquet of orchids and stephanotis. Mrs. Hubert Treacy, the matron of honor, wore yellow mousseline de soie and carried blue and yellow flowers. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Francis Coleman, Miss Margaret Collins and Miss Rita Casey.

Capt. Robert C. Gunnell served as best man, and ushering were Maj. A. Wayne Wanderly, Maj. George Ream and Lieut. Kenneth G. Beggs. A reception took place at the Hotel 2400.

The bride attended Immaculata Seminary and Major Buenzli is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

To Give Speech

Miss Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women in Washington, will be a speaker at the meeting of United Women of the Americas to be held in New York at the Biltmore Hotel on May 23.

Purely Personal

The Brazilian Naval Attache and Mme. Amorim do Valle have cards out for an informal party on Friday evening from 5:30 to 8 o'clock at their home, 3951 Massachusetts Avenue.

Mrs. Morgan Bradford left last evening for New Orleans, La. During her two-week stay in the South she plans to tour the delta country.

Mrs. H. G. Walker of Chevy Chase, Md., is spending several days in New York at the New Weston Hotel.

Col. and Mrs. Garland C. Black will go to New York to attend the graduation of their daughter, Marilyn Jean, from Edgewood Park on June 7, where she has been taking a home economics course.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith have returned to their apartment at the Westchester after spending a week in St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Randolph Saal, who were visiting in Washington, have returned to their home in New Orleans.

Miss Becker Is Bride-Elect of Major Whitmore

Col. Ward E. Becker, U. S. A., and Mrs. Becker announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Jane, to Maj. Edwards Clay Whitmore, Quartermaster Corps, U. S. A., son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Whitmore of Manhasset, N. Y.

Miss Becker attended Stephens College, Columbia, Mo., and Gunston Hall in Washington. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. James Frederick Pike and the late Mr. Pike of Seattle, Wash., and of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin D. Becker of Virginia, Minn.

Major Whitmore was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1936 and from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in 1938. He is a member of Zeta Psi Fraternity. He is a grandson of the late Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Clay Edwards of Salinas, Calif., and of Mrs. Welles Whitmore of Oakland, Calif., and the late Mr. Whitmore.

The wedding will take place June 12.

Lohr–Coyle Troth Told

Mr. and Mrs. William Truman Lohr of this city, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Frances Lohr, to Bernard James Coyle, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard James Coyle of this city and Upper Marlboro, Md.

Mrs. Coyle attended the University of Maryland and is a member of Sigma Nu Fraternity.

The ceremony will take place on May 31.

What a tablespoon of your used cooking grease can do at the front

IN spite of fat rationing, the government asks every American housewife to save at least a tablespoon of used cooking grease a day . . . after she's got all the cooking good from it. Every drop is desperately needed to make gunpowder. These pictures show what our armed forces can do with just a tablespoon of your kitchen grease.

Just think—one tablespoonful will make five bullets! And it would be hard to find a kitchen where at least that much cannot be saved every day. Saved for a month, a spoonful a day adds up to one pound.

So, after you have got all the cooking good out of fats from frying, roasting, broiling, etc., save them in a can. Any can, even a soup can will do. (It will go to tin salvage afterwards.) The moment you have a canful, rush it to your meat dealer. In just three weeks' time it will be gunpowder . . . to be used in the war-vital ways you see pictured here.

JUST ONE TABLESPOONFUL of used kitchen grease will fire five bullets. Five bullets can mean the difference between life and death to soldiers like these. You can save at least a tablespoonful a day in spite of rationing.

A SPOONFUL A DAY for one month adds up to a pound of fat—which makes gunpowder enough to fire four big 37 mm. anti-aircraft shells like the ones you see here all set to bring down a Nazi bomber. Remember, your Government wants you to get all the cooking good out of your kitchen fats first—then send them to war.

THIS MAY NOT look like a battle picture—but the fat in that can is on its way to the firing line. Even at the rate of a tablespoon a day, you can fill a can surprisingly fast. As soon as you have a canful, rush it to your meat dealer. Three weeks later it will be in the gunpowder factory.

THE DEADLIEST WARHAWK would be as harmless as a kitten, but for its firepower. Save a tablespoonful of used cooking grease every day for a month—and you'll have enough to fire ten rounds from these 50-calibre machine guns!

BOTH THE ARMY and the NAVY take time to save used kitchen grease. They know how urgently it's needed. Soup skimmings, pan drippings, old shortening—all are wanted. Save them!

WE USED TO get most of our fats from places now conquered by Japan. In the last war, loss of her fat supplies was one big reason Germany collapsed. Today, it's up to every American housewife—to you—to save waste kitchen fats—and TURN THEM IN!

Electric Cord Care

Electric cords deserve special wartime care. Handle them carefully so that they will wear well. Always disconnect the cord by grasping the cap that fits directly into the socket. Never give the cord a jerk as you might loosen a wire which could cause a short circuit or broken connection.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

"We fight and deliver the goods. But why do people make us feel like bums when we go ashore?" asked a bright, college trained lad—a merchant seaman.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

As beauteous Madeleine Carroll, Hollywood screen star, read this excerpt from a merchant seaman's letter to members of the Congressional Club at its meeting recently, there was hardly a tear-free eye in the crowded ballroom of the clubhouse.

Speaking in the interest of the United Seamen's Services, the tall, slim, blonde actress, continued: "Not enough has been known about merchant seaman. For months before Pearl Harbor the merchant seamen plotted their course across the far-flung seas. They are being called on to make the same sacrifices as sailors, soldiers and marines in this war, yet they have little recognition and no prestige."

Until recently the seamen who had been torpedoed and returned ashore without clothes could find no lodgings in hotels or rooming houses.

"We can right this wrong," Miss Carroll asserted, "and give justice by recognizing these men." There is still a regrettable degree of indifference and prejudice since the last war. Among the merchant seamen I have met men as heroic and gallant as you will find anywhere."

Wearing a trim, brown tailored suit and a matching felt hat, Miss Carroll went on to say that she believed in putting first things first. And that means getting Americans to appreciate the merchant seamen and bringing the seamen back to the glory of the old "Yankee traders," who played a vital part in the early history of our country.

Pointing out that some progress in the treatment of merchant seamen had been made with the launching of the United Seamen's Service, September 11 in Washington, to provide rest homes for shipwrecked seamen, Miss Carroll said that the aim of the organization is to establish rest homes in all parts of the world where American merchant seamen land.

Why did Miss Carroll give up a lucrative motion picture career to devote her time and energy to the United Seamen's cause? For one thing, she loves the sea. "To prove it, I married a seaman," she declared. "My husband ran away to sea at the age of 16. After Pearl Harbor he again joined the merchant seamen, he too giving up an actor's career. I wanted to do the shore work that he couldn't, and that is why I am working for the United Seamen's Service."

Again and again paying tribute to the merchant seamen, with whom she has worked for several months, she pleaded their cause seriously and earnestly.

And it was a record crowd that turned out to see and hear the pretty cinema actress. Not only was every chair taken in the club's large ballroom, but congressional wives and their guests jammed corners and doorways. Mrs. Clifford Davis, wife of the Tennessee Representative, remarked: "If we get Clark Gable to come to speak to us we can pay off the mortgage on the clubhouse."

Preceding the talk, an informal tea was held. Mrs. Thomas Ford of California, president of the club, presided.

French Linen Sale

Want a big of lingerie, table linen, gay organdie pinafores, all done with the skill of French experts? If so, hie yourself to the benefit sale today or tomorrow between 11 a. m. and 6 p. m. There at the home of Representative Joseph Clark Baldwin, 3525 Woodley Road, you will find the delicate handmade gifts, all done by native French women. The sale and tea are being sponsored by the Committee for French-American Wives and the Washington Council of Coordinating Council of French Relief Societies. Proceeds are to be devoted to the relief of French people.

For some time French women married to United States citizens have been plying their needles preparing for this sale. In fact, Mrs. Clark loaned them her attic for a workshop.

Mrs. Baldwin is vice chairman of the National Committee for French-American Wives, with Mrs. L. B. Smith of New York as chairman and Miss Alice Dodge as chairman of the Washington Chapter of the Coordinating Council. They have assisting them in the arrangements for the sale an imposing number of assistants who will display the articles and assist in selling for two days. In addition to the table linen and children's knitted wear, will be French books, some new, some old and some rare. The Countess de Marenches and Mme. Zuber have been busy collecting and evaluating the volumes.

Mrs. George Kirk will be in charge of the cash desk and Mrs. J. F. Griffis will preside over the lingerie and table linen, while Mrs. T. O. Dunwoody has charge of arranging the handmade French articles and children's clothes. Knittted wear, for which the French women are noted especially, is under the chairmanship of Mrs. D. Gibbs and Mrs. G. S. Wooding, serving as chairman of miscellaneous articles.

One Summer's Romance

—BY RITA HANSEN—

CHAPTER XIV

New York scared Lisa to death, even as she fell in love with it. She found it almost everything she had imagined, and a lot she hadn't. Inez Harrington, the blonde widow, who seemed to have forgiven Lisa for throwing them out of her house, gave a cocktail party for the press to meet List the first week. She was as bewildered by that as by anything she encountered. The press didn't pay any too much attention to her, but the next day there was a column in one paper about her and another ran a flashbulb, scared-looking photo with the caption, "Milkmaid Cinderella, New York's newest actress from the mountains of New Hampshire." She laughed at it, but Johnny was angry and said she didn't need publicity like that. At the end of the first week, he got in touch with Miles Wood, the famous director, and they made an appointment for a first reading of the script in Johnny's apartment.

Then she met Julie again. She had been avoiding meeting Julie but it had to happen and Julie turned out to be very friendly. "Darling, how wonderful to see you again!" she called halfway across a nightclub floor as she came up to their table. "Isn't it just thrilling how Jimmy discovers talent . . . anywhere! I loved your pictures in the paper!" She made a funny anecdote for the other people at the table, of the fire at Lisa's and the next day she took Lisa to lunch.

Watching Julie at lunch, watching her being charming and sparkling with all the people who came by to speak to her, Lisa felt a twinge of something like apprehension. She knew she could never be like Julie, no matter how she tried. Julie was what an actress ought to be. She suddenly felt plain and dull and very unfashionable. To Julie, she said, "Your dress is lovely. I wish I could wear things like that!"

Julie's dark eyes widened. "Lisa, honey, you'd look marvelous in something like this! Honestly" And then she leaned forward, whispering. "You know, I have an absolutely divine shop, it's a secret, but I'd like to take you there!"

"I'd be afraid to buy anything by myself, just at first," Lisa said.

"Of course, but all you have to do is ask me, darling! I'd just love to fix you up so you wouldn't know yourself!"

That phrase came back, to Lisa, two days later as she looked at herself in the mirror in the elevator going up to Johnny's apartment. The change was still startling to her, and she felt a little beginning of apprehension because this was the night of the audition for the show.

She was tired from the strain of the day and suddenly it seemed to her that the tinted foundation, the delicate eye shadow and the rouge made her look even more tired. They had started at Clarice's, a glittering, efficient place on Fifth Avenue where they tried to cut her long hair into a halo of 3-inch curls. That was the one thing she rebelled against, so they compromised by dressing her hair off her neck in a swooping feather of curls that swept over one eye. Clarice had arched her eyebrows and given her a new, wide-lipped mouth which Lisa was sure she could never duplicate. When she felt that her face looked more like a magazine cover than anything, they went shopping for clothes. At the secret little shop they put her into a sleek, brilliant wine red jersey dress draped with cunning and flattery. It felt almost like no clothes at all, and when they added a stark white coral necklace and bracelet, Lisa, enchanted with herself, took the whole outfit. At another, place they bought wonderful tiny sandals, just a pair of straps, soaring heels and thick platform soles. Because, as Julia said, she needed all the height she could get.

When they got out in the street again she was self-conscious for a few moments, feeling that the dress might be too tight or she wouldn't walk well in the difficult shoes. But they met Huck and another man for cocktails and when it was time for Liso to leave for Johnny's, she felt absolutely wonderful. Both the three Martinis she had had, and the warm and persistent admiration of Huck put her on top of the world. Until she got in the elevator alone. And then the tiny forerunner of a doubt crept into her mind. She didn't look like herself, but whether that was good or bad, she didn't know.

Johnny's Filipino boy answered the bell, and Lisa carefully watched his impassive brown face. She fancied he was a little surprised. At least he sounded surprised, "Miss Alden! Ev'body inside . . . please go in."

She heard Johnny talking, and then a deep voice which must be Miles. Symie was sitting in the corner and there were two girls and three other men, holding playscripts in their laps. She stopped in the doorway and waited for Johnny to see her.

The effect she produced was almost immediate. Johnny shot out of his chair as though she were a ghost and Symie muttered a groan that sounded something like a prayer. Miles said, "This isn't the girl, is it, Johnny?" The rest of the crowd stared curiously at Johnny.

He almost shook her in his emotion. "Lisa, what in the devil have you done?"

"What's the matter?" she gasped. "I just got some new clothes. "

"New clothes! You look like every run-of-the-mill, struggling young actress in New York! I ought to spank you!" Without another word, he ushered her into the bathroom and pulled off her hat. She had never seen him so angry. "Pull that hair down first." he ordered. "You're not Marlene Dietrich. And then get that goo off your face."

He ran hot water on a facecloth and scrubbed her face until it hurt. She was crying then, but she managed to tell him that she hated him and that she was going home in the morning.

"I don't care about the morning. You're going to read that part tonight if it kills you. There's a guest room through the other door. Get that dress off and put on the blue housecoat. And if you can't find any other shoes, come in barefoot. Only you're not going to back out on me; you're going through with the audition and you're going to show them you can do it!"

Choose Storage Place for Woolens With Care

It will soon be time to store away winter clothing and household furnishings. Heed the warnings of the Bureau of Home Economics Agricultural Research Administration, given here:

Clean. Before you store at home any article of wool, see that both the article and place of storage are clean and free from pests.

Dark. Sunlight and artificial light weaken wool fabrics and fade colors. A clothing bag is sometimes a protection from light as well as dust.

Dry. Dampness invites mildew. In very damp, warm climates, closets with drying and ventilating systems are often needed.

Former American Freighter Sunk

Dublin, May 17 (AP).—The Irish Oak, a former American freighter, has been lost at sea, but the crew was saved, it was announced officially tonight. The Irish Oak belonged to Irish Shipping, Ltd., and was sponsored by the neutral Eire government. No circumstances were announced.

The Irish Oak, a vessel of 5580 tons, was formerly the American freighter West Neris, which was turned over to Irish Shipping, Ltd., by the Maritime Commission in 1941, to carry food.

GOOD MORNING, SIR--DID YOU BRING MR. COLLINS TO THIS FLOOR LATE LAST NIGHT?
INDEED I DID, SIR. AT ABOUT TEN O'CLOCK.
(--TEN O'CLOCK! THAT WAS BEFORE I PARKED MY-- SELF BEFORE HIS DOOR!--)
AND DID HE LEAVE LATER THAT EVENING?
NO, SIR. AND HE COULDN'T HAVE WITHOUT MY SEEING HIM, FOR I WAS ON THE NIGHT SHIFT. THIS WAS THE ONLY CAR OPERATING. I'M TO GO OFF DUTY SOON.-- OH, THANK YOU SIR.
(--HM-MM. IT'S QUITE POSSIBLE COLLINS HAD DISAPPEARED BEFORE I ASSUMED MY FUTILE VIGIL. THIS MERITS INVESTIGATION!--)
WAIT, CLARK!
WE'VE STALLED LONG ENOUGH. IT'S ABOUT TIME WE STARTED TO EARN OUR BREAD AND BUTTER AS WAR CORRESPONDENTS. OUR FIRST STOP: THE AMERICAN EMBASSY.
(--NO EVADING LOIS. I'LL HAVE TO DEFER MY INVESTIGATION FOR THE TIME BEING. AFTER ALL, I'VE NO DEFINITE PROOF THAT COLLINS MET WITH FOUL PLAY!--)

WHAT YOU THROWING OUT?
OH, JUST A LOT OF OLD RECIPES. I'VE BEEN KEEPING 'EM FOR YEARS. THEY'LL NEVER BE ANY USE
YOU'VE BEEN SAVING RECIPES EVER SINCE WE WERE FIRST MARRIED
YES, I KNOW, I USED TO PASTE THEM IN A SCRAPBOOK
WHAT MADE YOU THROW 'EM AWAY ALL OF A SUDDEN?
MY GREAT-GRANDMOTHER'S RECIPE FOR CUPCAKE
WHAT! WHY, I THOUGHT THAT WOULD BE SACRED
YES, IT'S BEEN IN THE FAMILY FOR A HUNDRED YEARS, BUT THE OTHER DAY I FOUND IT AMONG THE LATEST RECIPES IN A NEWSPAPER

MALLORY STRAWS

Mallory Panama 5.25

ARE "CRAVENETTED" . . . SPECIALLY TREATED TO RESIST SUMMER SHOWERS AND TO RETAIN THEIR STYLE LINES

3.50 to 7.00

Keep a cool brow this summer. Don't let the torrid summer sun get you down. Decide right now to put the temperature in its proper place with a handsome, new Mallory Straw. You'll feel lots cooler . . . and looks lots smarter, too.

The new Mallory Straws for 1943 have plenty of zip . . . with new shapes, new band treatments and, of course, the classic Leghorns, Sennits and Panamas. Mallory's new braids and weaves in the pinch-fronts with tapering crowns are as comfortable as your old felt. And remember, every Mallory Straw is "Cravenetted" to resist moisture and rainspots for a longer life-span.
